

BALD

With help, a bald spot never grows smaller. It keeps spreading, until at last your friends say, "How bald he is getting."

Not easy to cure an old baldness, but easy to stop the first thinning, easy to check the first falling out. Used in time, baldness is a m.e. impossible with.

AYERS HAIR VIGOR

It stops falling, promotes growth, and takes all dandruff.

It always restores color to faded or gray hair, all the dark, rich color of early life. You may depend upon it every time. It brings health to the hair.

"I have used your Hair Vigor and am greatly pleased with it. I have only used one bottle so far and it has stopped falling out and has started to grow again nicely."

THE TWO BOYS.
John was known when a boy as an "idiot." A talkative loafer, a shirtless. While John was an old-fashioned fellow, who seemed to find pleasure in work. They say John is now a honest, hard-working boy, a brother to his neighbors. John is known as a labor reformer. And John is a fellow who labors.

VIRTUES OF GREAT MEN.

Pleasant instances of observance and humanity of temper may be found in the lives of Goldsmith, Ben Jonson, Sidney Smith, Lord "Vulcanator" and Abraham Lincoln.

Lessons of integrity and uprightness of principle are shown in the careers of Dickens, Newton Bards, Dr. Arnold, Scott, Sir Thomas Moore, W. Chambers, Howard, Handel, Loyola, Horner, Bargy, Emmet, Thiberry, Gunning, Wilberforce and Stowes Jackson.

For the many qualities of patience and forbearance in the persons the lives of Coleridge, Hampden, Davis, Hale, Tracy, Knecht, Sir H. Peel, Toocnwell, Watt, Bather, J. Hunter, Andeson, Kayard, Addison, Harvey, Henry Wilson, G. Lorrie, Plowman, West and Pugl.

For examples of energy, promptitude and hardihood, look into the biographies of Napoleon, Peter the Great, Balduin, Mural, Sheridan, Blaib, Ney, Bouillon, Michelis, Juarez, John Brown, Wellington, H. M. Stanley, Clive, Father Xavier, Nelson, Cromwell, Andrew Jackson and R. E. Lee.

TELEPHONE AND TELEGRAPH.

A writer in the "Scientific American," discussing the development of the telephone systems says: "One tendency of the development of telephones has been to increase the business done over telegraph lines. This tendency must certainly increase with the future rapid extension of telephone systems, so long as the two kinds of services take place over distinct lines. Both telegraph and telephone systems require enormous plants, mostly in the form of transmssion lines. Telegraph lines are comparatively idle during the day, but well employed at night, while the reverse is true for telephone lines. A moderate addition to the equipment of either system, at stations or exchanges, would enable it to compete in the local telephone service, performing the other and more difficult kind of service, superior to improve and cheapen the service of both telephone and telegraph companies, and may eventually lead to a union of these interests."

AN INNOCENT BOY.

"The other day a Declarer who has a good record of army service took down the family revolver to shoot a cat which had been hanging around the house. After looking at him while he fired six shots, he walked away. While he was loading up for more destruction than his mother's little boy required:

"Father, did you ever kill any one when you were in the army?"

"I suppose so, my son."

After a long pause the boy continued:

"Dad, you must have got beat enough to kill him with a gun, didn't you?"

It was then discovered to be about school time.

NERVOUS PROSTRATION

is only a failure of strength.

It takes strength to get strength.

Get strength of stomach first.

Your stomach will then look out for your body. Scott's emulsion of cod-liver oil enables your stomach to get it from usual food; and this is the way to restore the whole body.

We'll send you a little to try it, like.

INFLUENCE OF TRIFLING INCIDENTS.

The poet says: "Large streams from little fountains flow; Tall oaks from little acorns grow." Men are certainly often moulded by incidents seemingly of no moment as witness the following:

Lord Lansdale, Keeper of the Seal, to William III, of England, was extremely disengaged in his youth, to the great trouble of his grandfather, old Sir John Townshend, who was very wealthy, and means to be him his heir. He was engaged to the old gentleman, however, at a time continually circulating respecting the extra-marital nephews, that he took a journey up to London for the purpose of eliciting his will in favor of other relatives.

While there, Lansdale used to call on him every day to pay his respects. His John always smoked of an evening and on one occasion, having asked his nephew for a piece of paper to light his pipe, the latter drew from his pocket a letter, and tearing off the blank half of it, rolled it up to make a lighter, carefully extinguishing it and putting it away upon his nephew when his uncle had gone to sleep.

This little touch of economy was not lost upon John, who saw that his old gentleman did not stir his will; nor as it turned out, could his fortune have fallen into better hands than those of the once dissipated nephew.

NO WONDER THE CHEMIST WAS WORRIED.

A chemist had a good deal worried the other day, and it must be admitted not altogether without cause. The first he new about it was from a regular customer, who popped his head in and, holding approvingly, said, with a chuckle: "I wish I could say the same."

Then someone else called out to him: "You've got rid of your care. Happy man! And for you it seems a trifling affair." "Yes, old man!" Quite right, top! Ah, you know the value of them? And the like incoherent observations went on until the bewildered chemist at last rushed madly out of the shop and, shaking one of his persecutors, demanded to know what it all meant.

The captive said nothing, but smiling grimly he pointed "up" to the shop front where the laudanum ran: "Prescriptions dispensed with."

Some practical joker had painted out the concluding word care.

SHE HADN'T DROPPED OFF.

"Dolls!"

"Yes, ma'am."

"I'm very tired, and I am going to lie down for an hour."

"Yes, ma'am."

"If I should happen to drop off, call me up."

"Yes, ma'am."

He put his lady down, folded her hands, closed his eyes and soon was in the land of dreams. She was awakened by the clock striking 6, and cried indignantly:

"Dolls!"

"Yes, ma'am."

"Why didn't you call me at 5 o'clock, as I told you to?"

"I have dropped off," replied the woman.

"I'm very tired, and I am going to lie down for an hour."

"Yes, ma'am."

CASTORIA

For Infants and Children.

By Dr. F. H. Fletcher

Is my doctor wrong?

It's the progress of politics and religion in society by the depth of the divisions they create.

The traveller paid and made no remark; then, turning to the bag, he said:

"Now, my friend, have you paid for your dinner and your alms?" he said.

He then helped himself to a big supply of candles, placed them in the bag, and walked out.

NOT TO BE DONE.

A traveler entered a hotel and asked the price of a dinner.

"Five dollars," replied the waiter.

He then took a seat, and placed his bag on one of his chair sides. After dinner the waiter came to be paid, and asked for four shillings.

"But," said the waiter, "I have only had one dinner."

"Ah, but your bag has occupied the place of another person," replied the waiter.

The traveller paid and made no remark; then, turning to the bag, he said:

"Now, my friend, have you paid for your dinner and your alms?" he said.

He then helped himself to a big supply of candles, placed them in the bag, and walked out.

SMUT IN THE SMALL GRAINS.

The smut of the small grains are due to fungi parasites—i.e., minute plants that grow and multiply inside of the grain plants, coming to maturity in the kernels.

The smut, thus forming the so-called smut, is composed of the spores of these minute plants, and these spores propagate the disease as the seeds of weeds propagate weed plants. The spores are carried by the wind or upon the ground through the winter months, and when they fall, they infect with smut, with live spores and spores to the dead grains and are soon with them.

They are easily removed by washing with water and sunning.

HIS NOSE FOR NEWS.

"Hurray!" whispered the maid in some embarrassment, as they stood in the hallway, where the young and handsome reporter was preparing to say good-night. "It's dreadful of me, I know, but I've been reading out."

"Dad, ma, Paule!" he exclaimed.

"You don't think that's scoop for me, do you?" I know that as soon as I come in."

LIGHT ON A GREAT QUESTION.

"It is my opinion," said one sage,

"that a man who has a college degree is very likely to be a fool in life."

"Yes," answered the other, "and it is a rule that fools both ways. A man who is educated in life is very likely to get a college degree."

HAND TO PLEASE.

"I shall get on with that young woman all right."

"What's the trouble?"

"Oh, she gets mad when I say she's mature; and she gets mad when I say she's immature."

DIMINISHED VITALITY.

House people talk very differently about diminished vitality.

"They don't stop to think that vitality is the principle of life—that is, that little understood something on which every function of their bodies depends."

Diminished vitality is easily indicated by loss of appetite, strength and endurance, and Hoos' Barasaria is the great vitalityrestorer.
