MAGIC.

Although the wind blows less and shrills And more easily than in the lee To west and north the vale of hill In winter's roar so tempestuous.

Heads my heart! I hear the sound Of falling trees and shaggy boughs, As willows weep, as birches wail, My pleasant company of hawks.

From right and left they reach their hands And look with alluring glaze.

To carry me to leave, fair lands.

Oh! the falling leaves, the birds, I must be holding here, so far! Of time and distance take no heed!

The miles to grasp their willing aid And follow gladly where they lead.

What is life? that's what of art And living gets, and living drifts!

I'm lost, as light as drift Beyond the heartbeats, frost-bound world!

In vain the sounds of the north.

To drown my thoughts would engage;

By night I sleep, I dream, I wake;

The shade of the printed page;

JUST THERE.

Five-year-old Nell was playing cards with some of the chairs in the nursery, when a visitor came in and unfortunately selected one of the cards belonging to the imaginary train, and drew it out of the line.

Nell, disturbed, surveyed the train of the family for moment in silence, and then said:

"Did you know, Miss Reed, this is a train of stars?"

"Ah, is it indeed?" inquired the obese visitor. "Very well, I should like to take a ride."

This reply seemed not to be wholly satisfactory. The other chairs in the room were comfortable for visitors, Nell knew, but they didn't match her train. Presently she stood beside the car, again, with her little hands folded before her.

"Miss Reed," she asked hesitatingly, "where do you want to go off?"

"Oh, at New York," said the lady, with a smile.

"Well," said Nell in her sweetest tone, "this is New York where I'm stopping now."

And fortunately that delicate hint was acted upon, much to Nell's satisfaction.

Hospital.

I had been suffering about six months with neuralgia when I started taking Milburn's Rheumatic Pills. They did me more good than any medicine I ever used. Mrs. Anna Bryan, Sand Point, N. Y.

How an abscess in the Fallopian Tubes of Mrs. Hollinger was removed without a surgical operation.

"I had an abscess in my side. In the fallopian tube (the fallopian tube is a connection of the ovaries). I suffered until misery and was too weak I could scarcely get around. Then I began to pain low down in my side with a sharp pain. My physician said there was no hope for me unless I would go to the hospital and be operated on. I thought before that I would try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound which, forsooth, I did, and it has made me a strong healthy woman. My advice to all women who suffer with any kind of female trouble is to commence taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Mrs. Hollinger, Sullivan, Ill. $2.00 per bottle of about 16 fluid oz.

It would seem by this statement that women would have to pay much attention if they would get well. It is Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound at once and also written to Mrs. Pinkham for special advice. It is a good medicine.

COULDN'T BOSS THE CLERGYMAN.

The Rev. R. Perry Bush, of Chebo, who was present in a ministerial capacity at the opening of the convention of the Massachusetts Evangelical Association at the Quincy hotel last Wednesday, commented, in the presence of Mayor Collins, who was to address the assembly, "He was a few words of greeting. He related the instance of a stuffy undertaker and a funeral.

"As I entered the church," said Mr. Bush, "I was greeted by the undertaker in charge of the funeral, who said: 'I want you to stand there, pointing to half way up the pulpit steps.'

"I prefer to stand either at the top or bottom," I replied. "Then I enter my audience."

"You stand where I tell you," was the retort. "I'm running this funeral."

"But you are not running me," I answered. "And I will give you just one minute to withdraw your offer or get another minister." And I took out my watch and commenced to count the seconds. At the thirtieth he said: "Well, stand where you dare."

"And I did," exclaimed Mr. Bush. —Boston Herald.
