A TRUE INCIDENT.

A gentleman living in the country had a large sum of money paid to him, and before depositing it in the bank, was obliged to go from home, leaving his wife and little daughter without protector. Some time during the night his-wiwas awakened with a feeling that some one was in the house. She list oned and could hear footsteps moving about. The noise also aroused the and over again, but continue to drag little daughter. With childish trust slong and suffer with aches in the small she said. Mamma, won't God take of the back, pain low down in the side, care of us now pape is away." Her faith seemed to strengthen the mother, who yielded to her entreaties to pray that they might be kept safely. She arose from her bed, and, kneeling bealde it, poured forth a fervent supplication to the Heavenly Father to shield them from all harm, after which they again retired.

Upon going down stairs in the morning, they found overything as it should be, nothing had been disturbed. About two years later the father was sent to visit a man who had formorly been in his employ, and who then was lying on his deathbod. He confessed that upon the night in question, he had entered the house for the purpose of robbery, knowing that the gentleman had received the money, and had gone away from home, leaving his home unprotected, but upon hearing the prayer of his wife, his conscience was smitten, and he dared not carry out his evil intention.
