WONDERS OF PEAT

Herr Zschorner of Victors has been experimenting with peat for Afteen yeaks, and lies shown omedusively that it has many autonishing qualities. A building has been exhibited in which overything from the carpets on the floor to the curtains in the windown and the paper on the walls was made from post. The fibers of the remains of the reeds and grasses of which post is composed have, of course, their original physical and chemical characters changed; but the fibrous structure remains unharmed, and the fibers themselves are very durable, clastic, and nonconductors of heat.

Pabrica woven from them are found to have the toughness of linen, with the warmth of wool. There is no texthoug fibers. Blankets and other covering used for horses and cattle have been found to excel in warmth and
