Canada has never been found, want ing in the matter of loyalty to the motherland. Her loyalty is not confined to empty sentiment. Whenever the need has been shown this country has ever been ready to spend its last dollar for the defence of the emplre. The recent flurry, caused by Germany's aggressive attitude in the multiplying of warships, has again brought out Into the limelight Canada's loyalty. In the House of Commons on Monday It was shown in the debate on the resolution of Hon. Mr. Poster, that Canuda is willing and ready to bear her proper share of the naval defence of the empire and to establish, if necessary, a naval service on our own shores, The home authorities will be consulted and when their wishes are embodied in a frank statement Canada will be ready and eager to put Into effect andle mossures as are deemed to be of paramount value. A feature, most commondible, when this debate was in progress in the house, was the applauding from both sides of the house when the opposing leaders were speaking upon the subject-when "None was for a party and all were for the state."
