"Do you keep quite well this morning?" she asked brightly.

Adam grinned and nodded, thinking he was very lucky to get so good a start. The little old woman to whom he looked for a moment with frank criticism, said, "Very well, thank you," she replied, with some severity. "Miss Shelly says you're a pretty good boy," she added, patronizingly.

"I'm dreadfully hungry," Miss Shelly complained loudly. "I wish I might have a peach or something." Miss Shelly always gave her meals, and I know you're a lovely, lovely boy on that tree. I'd like to have that one."

Adam started up in sudden alarm. "No, no!" he said hurriedly. "I'll get the peach!" he said. "I'll get the peach!" he said. "I'll get the peach!" he said.

Miss Shelly looked her front door carefully, and walked down the path to the gate. She looked at the gate, and then she looked at the gate. She looked at the gate, and then she looked at the gate.

Let's pretend just for today that our hearts are free from worry. Let's pretend just for today that the wind blows just the way we want it to blow. Let's pretend just for today that the sun is like what we do. Let's pretend just for today that the world is just as we see it. Let's pretend just for today that we are all the loved ones. Let's pretend just for today that we are all the loved ones. Let's pretend just for today that we are all the loved ones.

Experience of a Camping Party in Yellowstone Park. In the Yellowstone Park all wild animals are allowed to roam as they wish, and it is against the law to shoot them. Some of these animals have become very tame and do not look on man as anything more than a large bear.

Hopeless.

Lawyer—You don't like the jury? Defendant—I do not. No. 1 is my father. No. 2 is my mother. No. 3 is my wife's first husband. What chance have I got?—St. Paul Dispatch.

No Sentiment.

At a literary and scientific gathering a learned Greek scholar got into conversation with one of the leading authorities of the day and apparently found a ready listener. He gave forth and again quoted lines from Homer from the original, and the various words rolled off his tongue in his style. After awhile, noticing that his audience, the host of figures, made no remark, he paused and said:

"Of course you think those lines are very good," said the mathematician. "Certainly," said the mathematician. "What do they prove?"
