MY FATHER LEADETH ME

O God, I trust in thee,
The way thou showest me;
Instruct I look to thee,
Thy purpose to show.

The source of joy I have
Is that which comes from thee;
That thou to all art merciful.
Thou dost best love for me.

I do not understand,
The way that leadeth best;
The Holy Spirit helps now;
"Thy burden He will share."

Forgetting, Lord, the past,
Just leaving it with thee;
I move straight on with confidence,
My Father leadeth me.

I know thou guideth will rise,
The world will not prevail;
The providence, not understood,
In beauty will appear.—Rev. R. J. Craig.

LEGENDS OF ANIMALS

Interesting Old Time Stories of Bird and Beast.

THE HORSE AND THE CAMEL

An Arabian Folklore Tale Tells Why Every Steed Shudders on First Meeting With a Camel—Solomon and the Neck of the Vulture.

In the beginning the birds had no feathers, but at last word was brought that the Great Spirit had their clothes ready. If they would send some one for them. As the distance was long, the turkey buzzard was selected on account of his endurance, and in recognition of his service, he was to have first choice of any animal he might be willing to let him have. He could try no salt for a second time. Can you guess the result? For one striking objection or another he let all the fine feathers go by until, to his horrified astonishment, there was nothing left but the poor, commonplace suit that he wears today.

We talk conceitedly of the wizardry as though a brand new invention of the modern brain when thousands of years ago King Solomon had a most satisfactory one, a magic carpet upon which he frequently took a spin through space. Only such a suit can be found with this carpet touring car. It had no covering, and too often the sun's rays uncomfortably upon the royal robes. Now, the wisdom of Solomon includes the linguistic accomplishment. The king, who was a language of birds. So one day when out riding on his carpet he called upon some passing vultures to hold their wings over him by way of awning. But, they were going north, the king turned the south, and to his righteous indignation the birds insolently refused.

"Cursed be ye, O vultures!" he cried in wrath. "And because you will not obey the commands of your lord who rules over the whole world the featherless ones will fall off and the heat of the sun and the coldness of winter and the keenness of the wind and the heating of the sun shall fall upon your rebellious necks, which shall not be protected with feathers like the necks of other birds, and, whereas you have hitherto been so delicately henceforward you shall be naked and your race shall be ignoble until the end of the world."

According to Arab folklore, one-day Allah called the south wind to him, commanded it to take a handful, blow upon it, and life should then create a horse. But this wind, as we began to find fault. His neck, he complained, was too short to reach the ground, his back had nothing to steady a saddle, his hoofs were so sharp that they would surely sink into the sand, indeed, his bit, his ingenuity in words. Allah then created a camel as an object lesson of reproach.

The horse shuddered at the sight of what he wanted to become, and this is the reason that every horse starts when first meeting his caricature.

He who has not had the opportunity of getting a horse into the mouth of a coyote and so has never wondered why its back teeth looked though they were broken off and forced down into the gums, but you may see it come across many an arid desert.

To the south of the Zind Lands in New Mexico a coyote once started hunting, but got no farther than the foot of a certain old pine tree, so fascinated did he become in a focus who sat atop it, crooning, singing in one of its boughs. In fact, he was so enthralled that he forgot his hunting instinct that he insisted upon taking a lesson on the spot. His voice proved hoarse and grizzly, but he persevered until he learned the code of the forest song and turned toward the south. And when, then, when by bad luck he fell into a pheasant's hole, said other words under his breath and forgot his home.

Back to the pine tree, he trotted, heavily impeded by the load of good natured song, galled forth in triumph. But this time he was expected, and he frightened a flock of pheasants that flew out with such a noise as completely to shudder his brain, and there was nothing left for him but another upstart.

Now, when a horse goes to turn, and the heart, seeing him coming from afar and having heard that coyotes are insects, decided to rid himself of this tiresome fellow. No sooner thought than done. In a flash he swelled up, split his skin, and ran away. Playing at hand a sleek, light-colored tail of quartz, he put it to the empty skin, unrolled it up the back with pitch and tied it on to another tree.

This trick worked a charm. The coyote, cowed to the supposed venomous and venomous without receiving a really became curious, and finally, edgy out of the tree and hit so hard on the stone that he ran yelping away. The water of a creek partly soothed his pain, but after three or four mouthfuls he showed signs of distress, tracheal bite, and when over a hundred ventures out on a summer morning to sing a song it is his custom to project himself from the consequences of attracting too much attention by skinning himself and leaving his counterpart in the tree!—May G. Langwall in Los Angeles Times.

Henna Leaves and Sage Will Grow Like

It has only recently been discovered that Henna leaves contain the ingredient to grow new hair. England and Paris have been flooded with preparations for the prevention and cure of baldness. The Henna grows hair, and every one of these preparations have an enormous sale. Affectionate hairlessness is practically a standstill, and the ones containing the Henna are found in every home. Society ladies purchase them by the dozen bottles. On the streets of London and Paris can be seen women with beautiful, luxuriant heads of real, fluffy hair. The same woman only a few months ago had her head decorated with artificial hair. The first one of these preparations to reach Canada is called HALVIA and is sold and guaranteed by E. J. Howard. HALVIA will grow hair in abundance and Cure Baldness in ten days, or your money back. A large bottle, £5.

TAKE COURAGE

Have you some physical disability which stands in the way of realizing your ambition? Think of Helen Keller, blind and deaf, shut out from common life, but she has won a million for that he could try no salt for a second time. Can you guess the result? THE ART OF FORGETTING

If more of our worries and exposures were ever lost, if they stayed with us from the time of their arrival till life's close, existence would be an unbearable burden. In self-defense we are forced to forget.

When a boy has sucked the juice out of an orange he throws away the bitter rind. That is good sense. When you have learned the lesson there is a failure or disappointment stop thinking about it. Forget all that does not contribute to your present happiness and your future success. If a good memory is a valuable asset, no less is to be said of the art of forgetting.

Liver Complaint Cured.

"I had been troubled with Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint and tried various remedies but obtained little or no benefit. A friend advised me to try your Liver Pills. A trial, but when I had tried so many others I was not very hopeful. If they don't help, or care you, it is your price. So having faith in the pills, I took them. I am not deceived, for they were the best I ever used. They gave relief which had a decided effect, for they were the best I ever used. And the beauty about them is, they are small and easy to take. I believe them to be the best medicine I ever took that has to do with my health. Price 25 cents a box for $1.00, all dealers, or will be sent direct by mail on receipt of price."

TEMPERANCE INSTRUCTION

Some of the English educators are insisting that temperance instruction should rank in the schools in importance with language and arithmetic. If those who desire to fit their pupils for life, cannot afford to make this big question a matter for occasional reference, and still less to postpone it to the upper grades or the high school. Every child that spends five years in school should go out into life equipped by knowing something of the effect of alcohol on the human body, and of temperance upon performance.

There never was and never will be a universal panacea in one remedy for all life to which flesh is heir. What would relieve one ill in turn would aggravate the others. We have, however, in Quinine Wine, when obtained in a sound, undiluted state a remedy for many and grievous life.

Its preudal and judicious use the fractal systems are led into convalescence and strength by the influence which Quinine exerts on Nature's own restorative. It relieves those of the body which are shrunken off by disease and debility and lack of interest in life; a disease, and by transplanning the nerves disposed to sound and refreshing sleep—imparts vigor to the action of the blood, which being stimulated, courses through the veins, strengthening the healthy, and invigorating the system, thereby making activity a necessary result, improving the frame and giving life to the digestive organs which naturally demand increased substance—result, improved appetite.

Northrop & Lyman, of Toronto, have given to the public their superior Quinine. The opinion of a sanitaria, the wine approaches nearest perfection of any on the market. All druggists sell it.

ONE ON UNCLE ZEBULON

"Uncle Zebulon," said the boy from the city, "what do you keep in this back yard over here?"

"That's where I keep my sheep."

"And what do you keep in that yard over there?"

"The goats."

"That's unscriptural, uncle. You ought to have the sheep on the right and the goats on the left."

Uncle Zebulon looked at him over his glasses, but said nothing. The boy cleared his throat.
