GOING VISITING

"When I get out to spend the day, I say when I must come away; So they tell me 'Time to go.' Because I might forget you now! At which I have a funny fit— So slippery that I nearly fall, And hardly can stay on at all. I wear a napkin like big folks, And I don't ever have to coax For many months now, 'cause I spread' My collar thick up over my head. I never have to eat the crust— They don't tell visitors 'You must.' And I have ketchup on my meat, And truly tea's that very sweet. And all the time I'm glad I came, Why going home's the best of all. And hearing mother's softly call— 'Is that my sunbeam back again?' And then she kisses me, and then I know I love her hand, if she Does sometimes say 'You can't,' to me." —Interior.

WE COULD NOT GET ALONG WITHOUT JIMMY

A young working girl, leaving the factory early one Saturday afternoon, stopped at a fruit stand, and invested in a large yellow orange. "It's for my brother," she explained to the girl at her side. "The lame one that hasn't ever walked."

"It's awful hard on you, having a brother like that," said the other with awkward sympathy. But the sister looked a little doubtful.

"Of course we have to have Jimmy," said she slowly, "but that's the bad part of it. Why, we couldn't get along without Jimmy, none of us. Some of the families in our building are always quarreling with one another, but we'd be ashamed to say cross things before Jimmy. He always wants to hear everything that happens, and so we sit around in the evenings and tell him everything that happens, 'cept maybe when something goes wrong. I tell you," she added, returning suddenly to her original text, "we couldn't get along if it wasn't for Jimmy."

There are young people who at times are tempted to believe that they are of use to the world, and such are inclined to contemplate the case of the bed-ridden cripple, who is a family of tollers had made himself indispensables. Courage and kindness, love and good cheer, are all the equipment we need for making ourselves of service to our fellow-men. No one is useless as long as he can help to make another happy, and no one is past contributing to the happiness of those about him till he has died of his heart.

A WISE FISHERMAN

A Methodist preacher sat down at a hotel breakfast table beside a young man and said: "Good morning."

The young man replied, "Good morning. I am a travelling man."

"So am I," said the preacher.

"This is my first trip out," said the man.

The preacher answered, "I am an old hand."

"I am in the jewellery business," the man added.

"So am I."

"My father started the business."

"So did mine."

"All first he hired me and paid me well."

"So did mine."

"Now I am a partner in the business."

"So am I."

"I share in the profits."

"So do I."

"I want to make a good trip and give in a good report when I get home."

"Please God, so do I."

And the drummer began to feel that he had been caught on the back of a tactful soul-winner. "He that is wise wins souls. Will we all be able to give a good report when we get home?"

On Sale Everywhere.—There may be country merchants who do not keep Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil, though they are few and far between, and these may suggest that some other oil is just as good. There is nothing so good as a liniment or an internal medicine in certain cases. Take a look at its label. The demand for it shows that it is the only popular oil.

He that despiseth small things will perish little by little.—Emerson.

Many a man who merely passes the hat gets a reputation for philanthropy.

Silence not in the tents of your fathers; the world is advancing and advance with it.—Maximilian.

Luxury grows on people; it begins in cabbages and ends in iron chains. The more business a man has to do, the more he is liable to accomplish, for he learns to economize his time.—Sir Matthew Hale.

Invest 25 cents in a box of Dr. D. & L.'s Menthol Salve ("The Bearine") and be prepared for a hundred ailments, which may not be dangerous but are very annoying and painful, like neuralgia, earache, sprains, burns, bruises, insect stings, cuts, piles, etc. It is a household remedy always useful for some trouble, and should be kept in the family medicine closet.

Prevent and Relieve Headache

"It gives me great pleasure to be able to refer to Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills as the best remedy we have yet found in our house for the prevention and cure of headache. My wife who has been a constant sufferer for a number of years with above complaint joins me in the hope that they may fall into the hands of all sufferers."

JOHN BUSH,
Waterloo, Me.

Used Them Four Years.

"Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills are the best I ever tried for the relief of headache. I have used them for nearly four years, and they never fail to give me relief. I have tried many other remedies, but have never found any better."

JOSEPH FRANKOWICK,
851 Tremont Av., Detroit, Mich.

There is no remedy that will more quickly relieve any form of headache than

IMAGINATION UNDER CONTROL

A great many people who are fully successful in controlling their temper, take little or no effort to control their imagination. If one of the family is late for dinner, instead of assuming that business has temporarily detained him, they begin at once to fancy that he has been the victim of an automobile accident, and perhaps even now is lying unconscious at some hospital. If one of the children in the family doesn't want her supper and confesses to a headache, it is immediately assumed that she is coming down with scarlet fever.

An unbridled imagination, is productive of unbridled horrors, is productive of nearly as much distress as an unbridled temper, and it is our business to control one as much as the other.

There are young people who at times are tempted to believe that they are of use to the world, and such are inclined to contemplate the case of the bed-ridden cripple, who is a family of tollers had made himself indispensables. Courage and kindness, love and good cheer, are all the equipment we need for making ourselves of service to our fellow-men. No one is useless as long as he can help to make another happy, and no one is past contributing to the happiness of those about him till he has died of his heart.
