LINCOLN AND TEMPERENCE

These incidents were told me by well-known lawyer of this city, who is the son of one of the most distinguishad attorneys of Central Illinois, now deceased, a contemperary and acquaintance of Mr. Lincoln himself. This lawyer got them first hand from Judge Lawrence Weldon, who was close friend of the great Commons and was present when the incidents courred, empetime during the early fifties, when Stephen A. Douglas, Judge Weldon and Mr. Lincoln were stopping at the old "Pike House" in Bloomington.

The three distinguished lawyers were in Judge Douglas' room wh there was plenty of whiskey to be had Mr. Lincoln was asked to take a drink He declined with thanks.

sarcastically. "You don't belong to the temperence cause, do you?" "No." was Lincoln's quiet reply,

"but I am temperate." The second incident took place in Clinton, Itt. Judge Weldon and Mr. Lincoln were leaving the court house after a long, wearlsome session of the court. Passing a tavern, at Judge Weldon's suggestion, they stopped and went in. The judge ordered glass of beer.

"Lincoln, won't you have some?" Inquired. "No" replied Lincoln, "thank you, don't wish any; in fact, I don't know what it looks like." "What," exclaimed Judge Weldon "never saw any boor. Well, I want you to see it and taste it, too." So ordered another glass. Mr. Lincoln took it and raised i his tips. "Weldon," he said, putting down the glass, "that's absolutely the vilest stuff I over put to my lips. as soon drink slop."-Edgar De Witt
