The speech transmitted through the water has been very distinct and the system has shown good possibilities for use as a means of verbal communication between two ships, such as a battleship and a submarine. The effect is very directional, and another advantage is that with a small tuned buzzer tolebraphic signals can be transmitted through the earth or water for distance of several miles. The primary energy required is extremely small, four watts sufficing to telephone over a distance of two miles."

COOT OF PYRAMIDS

A contractor with a boad for figures and building colimates has petimated that the Cheops pyramid could not be duplicated for less than $100,000,000. With modern machinery and the employment of forty thousand stone outters, baulers, quarrymen, masons and laborers, a duplicate of the pyramids could be erected in two years. It baileon calculated that the work really required the service of one hundred thousand men for thirty years. The Cheops pyramid occupies a space of twelve and three quarter scree, and le 766 feet high.
