SOMETHING NICE

According to the following anecdote, from the Sacred Heart Review, people who do right, as well as those who do wrong, sometimes resolve not to do it

A gentleman board that a young girl-whose mother was in goor circymatanosa - was convalescing from a dangerous sickness. Forthwith he went to a fruiterer's and secured some choice bunches of Hamburg grapes at one dollar or thereabouts a pound. He carried them, not without some self-untisfaction, to the house of the invalid, and left them with her mother, who received them in a dublous kind of menner that did not evince, as he thought, much gratitude. This did not trouble him much however, but the next day when he called he received a blow which almost made blen results never again to be generous to atrangers.

"How did your daughter like the grapes ?" he said to the grin and undemonstrative matron.

"ith bretty well," was the reluctant "Did she cat them all ?" was the next

"Yes, who gest away with them," was the reply." "But she is a good deal like me ; she likes something nice and tasty -like canned corn."

A THE RESERVE TO PROPERTY. OUTWITTING THE LAIRD

The people of two Scotch villages, in going back and forth, had long been accustomed to cross the extensive grounds of Lord So-and-So, especially when the family was absent. The short cut saved a full mile, and natur ally the villagers used it as often as possible, till at last they came to feel that they had a right of way.

Even when the owner was at home some of the bolder spirits would "run the blockade," knowing all the while that if his lordship caught them they would be bidden to "go back the way they had come."

One day a farmer wheeling his berrow along the forbidden path, caught sight of the lord some distance in advance. Instantly the farmer turned his barrow about and sat down on it as if resting. On came the laird, and presently turned the corner. The farmer ant with his back toward the nobleman.

"Come, now," said the angry laird, none of this trespassing. Wheel about and go back by the way you have come." ... The farmer wheeled about and went
