SAD DROWNING IN FAIRY LAKE

Little Herbie Agnew Pall in Weste Wair and Was Drowned

In three-quarters of a century there ave been remarkably few drowning ecidents in Fairy Lake, and it was many years since the last one. But on Friday afternoon little Herble Agnew, the youngest son of Mr. George Agnew, met his death there with no one to witness the tragic event.

The bright little fellow had been playing about the lawn and garden during the afternoon, all the time under life mother's eye. About three or a little before he told his mother be was "going over to Grandma's,"-Mrs. Hobert Agnew's, on Park Ave. just a few yards away. After spending a little time at his grandmother's he left for home, but lostead of going there he went through W. D. Anderson's garden and on to the mill dam. Mrs. Anderson saw him going through and thought he was just walking down to the water as the children often do, and would go on home by

Mill Street. About half an hour later the poor little fellow was seen floating in the Clark, pond near the waste gate by Mr. Robt. Wallace, Jr.; who gave the alarm. Roeve Hynds, Dr. Holmes and Chief Ian History-K. Gibbons; in Geogra Lawson rushed to the scene and found | phy ... J. Moore. the body in about two feet of water at the gate. Swat the files and do it at once, before eggs are laid and your house is filled with disease-carrying flies. There was a time when the fly was not very seriously regarded, and when ordinary measures for its extinction and sup pression were considered all sufficient. But people have grown wiser. They have learned a thing or two in late years about mosquitoes and flies and such like flying vermin. They have learned that many of the fevers which were decrimating warmer localities were directly tenocable to mosquitoes (Havana, Cuba, be case in point) and that when the mosquitoes were driven out the fever disappeared.
