

TRY IT, BUY QUICKLY

Betty Botter bought some butter, "more" she said, "this butter's better, if it put it in my butter, it will make my butter better. But a bit of better butter, that's what I want. And made her butter better better. No 'was better Betty Botter Bought a bit of better butter."

A THING WORTHY OF UNLESS IT'S RIGHT

"There, I guess that will do," Bert said as he laid aside his Latin books. There were two or three copies in the Caesar lesson that he was not sure he translated correctly, and he looked nervously at Mr. Maxwell, his Latin teacher, would not ask him to give the construction of several words which were used in the text in rather a peculiar way. But for all that he considered he had his lesson "well enough," and that he was ready to turn his attention to his geometry text. And he grumbled more than a little the next day when Mr. Maxwell, falling to agree with him that he had his Latin lesson "well enough," gave him a lower mark than he thought he ought to have.

A month or so later, Bertrand, who had thoroughly enjoyed his manual training work at the high school, set about making a new chair for his father's use at the dining table. It was to be a birthday gift, and so had to be finished by a certain day. As the time grew short, and there was still a good deal of work to be done, Bertrand in his haste neglected to check his work, and made a mistake in measuring one of the pieces that were to form the legs of the chair. It was such a little mistake, only a fraction of an inch, that Bertrand wondered if it would not do, after all.

"It will have to do, that's all," he said to himself impatiently. "I haven't another piece to use, and if I don't use this, I can't get the chair done in time. I don't believe it will make much difference."

And so he used the piece that he had cut a little too short. It didn't make a great deal of difference. Just enough that the chair did not stand quite firm or steady. At the next meeting of the family, it was a well-made chair, a chair that looked well, a chair that was very comfortable to sit in if it had only stood firm and true. Bertrand had felt proud of his work as it progressed, but now his pleasure in what he had done was spoiled by this imperfection that showed so plainly. Instead of offering his gift to his father proudly, conscious that he had done a good piece of work, he had to present it with an apology for the missing fraction of an inch.

When the chair had been in use for two weeks or so, it disappeared from the dining room one Saturday morning, and when he went to his place at night, it no longer "wobbled" but stood strong and true, an honest piece of work of which any boy might be proud.

"Well, well!" his father said in pleased surprise as he sat himself down. "What has happened to my chair? It stands as steady as any chair in the house now."

"I took out that leg that I cut a little too short and put in a one that is the right length," Bertrand said several proudly. "If you're going to make furniture, you've got to have it just right or it's a failure. I thought that leg would do, but a thing won't do to woodwork unless it's right. Since his experience with the chair, Bertrand had been less ready to throw aside his school books when he was first partly learned his lesson, for the first time he tried, saying to himself, "I guess that will do," those things that he had learned to do. "A thing won't do to woodwork unless it's right."

And he could not help feeling that if it would not "do" in woodwork, the chances were that it would not "do" anywhere else.

THE FOUR QUARTERS
A man in Luncheon by the name of Moon got married and that was a change of the moon. In due time his wife presented him a daughter; then there was a new moon; then he went down town and got drunk for joy, and that was a full moon; when he started home he had only 25 cents, and that was the last quarter. His mother-in-law met him at the door with a rolling pin and that was a total eclipse.

Mrs. Wm. Martin, Lower Fifth Harbor Road, N.Y., writes: "I am writing you a testimonial of my cure by Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup. Last May I took a cold, and it settled on my lungs. I got so bad I could not rest at night. I had two doctors to treat me but got no relief. 'All my people thought I had Consumption. I had fallen away to a shadow. I had given up all hope of ever getting better again until my daughter went to a store one day and bought me a bottle of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup. After taking half of it I felt better, so I got two more, and thanks to them I am well today, and able to do my house work. I cannot say too much in his praise, and I shall always keep it in the house."

RAILROAD MAN HAD TO LAY OFF

"I have been a Pullman conductor on the C. P. R. and Michigan Central for the last three years. About four years ago, I was laid up with intense pain in the groin, a very sore back, and suffered most severely when I tried to urinate. I treated with my family physician for two months for Gravel in the Bladder but did not receive any benefit. About that time, I met another railroad man who had been similarly affected and who had been cured by GIN PILLS, after having been given up by a prominent physician who treated him for Diabetes. He is now running on the road and is perfectly cured. He strongly advised me to try GIN PILLS which I did with the result that the pain left me entirely."
