LOST BY NEGLECT

It is said that Charles Darwis," who in his youth was as impressionable as most young people, to the influence of music and poetry, absolutely lost his taste for such things in a lifetime gives to science, and was surprised and sorry in the course of time to find that he could not listen with any enjoyment to Shakespeare. A girl who feeds her musical tastes on ragtime will gradually lose the ability to aplate Beethoven. The young man who spends his leisure with companlone who are coarse and common, will gradually loss his taste for cultivated society. The taste for the best thing must be nourished or it will be lost.

MAKING YOUR ROAD AS YOU GO

One of the most common of mistakes in the amppendation that opportunity means floding one's feet on a safe highway, with nothing to do but to press shead. As a matter of fact, the men who have achieved success generally have hadder build as they pre. The planeer cutting deten the forest trees obstructing the advance, and the engineer blacting away the rooks which har his progress, are typical of all who achieve. The roads leading to the goal of the ambituous are seldom made beforehand. They must be made as you go along.
