TURNING CHILDREN INTO HELPERS

To make her little daughters helpful one mother originated the following plan: Kach morning she would write on a blackboard a list of twenty or more duties for the day-washing dishes, sweeping, dusting, making beds, etc. A quarter of these were little things that even the 5-year-old boy could do like bringing in kindling or giving the hene water. Kach girl in turn selected one duty, placing her is the best medicine extant to destroy | initial after it. As soon as a duty was completed it was erased from the

At first the most difficult work fell to 'mother,' but soon even the hard tasks were being selected by daughters, until they all became proficient in most of the necessary branches of home-making. The plan not only helped the mother and taught the daughters, but also served to prevent shirking, jealousy and that constant nagging which makes life miserable in many bomes.

To Face WITH A Serious Problem.

BAD WATER WAS THE CAUSE

MRS. HOWARD KINGSTON, MITTOF, Alta., writes:-"Coming to the North west from B.C., in the summer of 1910, we were face to face with the serious problem of being able to secure good drinking water; this we could not get, so were obliged to drink water containing a great deal of alkali, with the result that we were all troubled with Diarrhea. Portunately, we had a bottle of Dr. Pow-EXE'S EXTRACT OF WILD STRAWBURRY in the house which soon relieved our sufferings. WITHAM BUOLOGNOONU

Few bad habits are formed deliberately. Indeed it happens not infrequently that people form a habit without knowing it. A certain rather in tense young woman fell into the way of making faces if she read anything that interested her especially. She wrinkled her forehead, protruded ber lips and indulged in the most astonishing grimaces, without any idea what she was doing, till at length a friend ventured to remonstrate with her. Then she indignantly denied that such a thing was possible and would hardly be convinced by the combined testimony of her felends and family.

It is well to keep a sharp watch over purselves for objectionable habits which we may have formed unconeci ously. And if some outsider gives us a hint that there is some fault we need to correct, instead of tesenting it let us accept it gratefully.

A THREE FOOT LEAP.

As Thrilling Schind the Booms as Fer The opera is "Tosca." You alt breathless in your sest in the last act waiting for the climax, when Touca shall find Cavaradoest not shamming, but dead by the trickery of the slain Scarpia, and shall run and loap over the parapet to be dashed to places far below. The captain and his guards look over the edge, aghast at the eight. You rise from your seat thrilled. Now go behind the scenes and watch Tosca lean. Nearly every one who can leave his post does go back stage, laft, for this climax, which is as exciting in the reality as it is in the pretense for those who alt on the other side of the footlights. Before the curtain went up a stage hand had dragged across and thrown down just beneath the parapet a mattress some twelve inches thick and the size of an ordinary bed. The opera moves swiftly. The soldiers fire the volley, and Cavaradoesi falls. Tosca, learning the truth, rushes to the parapet, looks backward toward

E ALL ADVERTISE. A man advertises his character by his deeds, his wisdom by his words or by his silence. A merchant's store, stock and windows speak either well or ill of his business. So when a man says "No, I do not advertise," he knows not what he says. What he really means is that he does not publish printed advertisements.

Some proclaim this as though it were a virtue-yet spend much effort and invest much money in advertising their business through mediums other than the printed word. They may make their wares fit for a king-yet hesitate to introduce them to Brown or Smith, This is inconsistency .- Advertisers' Bulletin.
