THE STORY OF THE CHILD AND THE ROSE

One afternoon in the early summer a little child went out to the garden to play, It was his mother's garden and it was filled with rose bushes. The mother had often taken the child there to walk with her, and as she bent ever the busines and touched the dark green leaves and the hard prickly huds, she would say :

"fixen these bads will open and then the roses will tell you their story." But the child didn't understand how the buls could upon or how a flower could tell a story.

But on this beautiful afternoon, as the child votored the garden, be saw that one of the hard, prickly bude had become a great red rose. He bent over and touched it and be said : "Good morning, big red rose ! Can you tall me a story ? And the rues slowly opened its dark red lips and it said : "What kind of a story shall I tell you, little child?" The child waited for a whole minute. for he was no surprised to find that the rose could apeak. They be said :

"Tell me the story of how you grew The last time I saw you, you were a hard, green bud; and to-day you are a big red rose I"

"Th," said the rose, "don't you know how I grow? I do just as my Father wants me to do. I let my roots go way down deep loto lile warm molet earth, and I turn my head way up to His warm, bright sun." "Is that how you grow?" said the

"You," said the bir red ross. "My Father takes care of me, don't you see?
