MY LIFE IS BUT A WEAVERING

My life is but a weaving,
Between my thad and me;
I may but choose the colors,
He walks steadily,
From off the mountain arrow,
A man's foot wide,
Forget he sees the upper,
And I the under side.
I choose my stumps all golden,
And wail for woven shirts
I make for the pattern,
It is not the pattern,
I cannot yet remember,
Whom hands the shuttles guide,
And that my stars are blushing,
Upon the sky.
I choose my threads all crimson,
And wait for flowers to bloom;
For wavy and wavy to bloom
Upon that mighty loom.
Full of life and fun,
And free from thad;
Though flowerings wreaths and garlands
May deck the upper side!
My life is but a weaving,
I weave the pattern,
I am the design, the temple,
The fair design sees He.
Then let me wait in patient
And blindness, satisfied
To make the pattern lovely
Upon the upper side.

JOY FINDS A HOME

Not long ago there was a touching story in one of the Chicago daily papers about a little boy who was without any home. His name was Joy. He had lost both his parents, and then his guardian had died so that five years he was left homeless for the second time. He had no living relatives.

Hundreds of telephone calls, telegrams, and personal inquiries were made out the newspaper. Hundreds of homes were open to Joy, not in charity, but because hundreds of homes really wanted to make him their son. The editors of the newspaper were deeply touched by the eager, spontaneous way that came to the aid of the children's homes.

Some of the people who wanted to adopt Joy were rich, some were well-to-do, others were in moderate circumstances and some were poor. The paper made a careful investigation and selected a few of the most suitable families. From among these it asked Joy to choose his home.

Joy started out with a representative of the newspaper and visited one home after another. For two days the little fellow was undecided. The whole city became eager to know what his choice would be, and the suspense of the childhood families who had adopted him was exciting. On the third day Joy visited a home, but was not particularly sure. It was a house of a very modest sort—comfortable enough, however, with no signs of wealth and no offer of luxury. The woman came down the hall as the little boy came in at the front door. She spoke one word—"Joy!" Instantly the little fellow ran to her; and as she caught him up he threw his arms about her neck.

Joy had found a mother, and the woman's hungry heart had found a son. And all the city who had watched the drama said how fortunate was this woman, who had no great wealth to offer and who had yet won the little fellow's heart.

But it was not luck or childish caprice that settled the question. The woman had loved children all her life and had given her time and thought and care to the task of making them happy and good. And, too, the children had worked for that, and the sign of it was upon her face and in her voice. The little boy knew as soon as he saw her that she was the best mother of them all for him.

In that way, so indirectly that it often seems accidental, we get our richest compensation for love and service and right living. Upon what we have been depends what we are to get.—Youth's Companion.

LEAVING THE LINCOLN

A captain out on the ocean liners was showing a young lad friend of his over the ship when they were on a return trip. As they passed through the steamer recalled his far companion's attention to his big bushy Irish immigrant who was putting away with a knife, fork and spoon a bountiful plate of beef and cabbage, combined with other articles of diet. "The captain eyed him for a moment, then, addressing the young lad he said:

"Just look at the enormous amount of food the fellow is consuming."

"I suppose, captain," said the young girl with a bounding smile, "he is what you call a slow-away."

COULD NOT STAND ON FEET

Mrs. Baker So Weak—Could Not Do Her Work—Found Relief In Novel Way.

Adrian, Mich.—"I suffered terribly with female weakness and backache until I got to work that I could hardly do my work." When I washed my dishes I had to sit down and lean against the wall to keep the floor. I would sit so weak that I would have to get a drink every few minutes, and before I did my work I had to lie down.

He got to his doctor, and got poorly that my folks thought I was going into consumption. One day I found a piece of paper blowing around the yard and I picked it up and read it. It was Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and it was for women. I showed it to my husband and he said, "Why don't you try it?" So I did, and after I had taken two bottles he felt better. I had to take it every day and need more," he said. "I had better take it a little longer anyway." So I took it for three months and got well and strong."—Mrs. Alonso E. Baker, 9 Tecumseh St., Adrian, Mich.

Not Well Enough to Work.

The woman who had been ill by of many a woman, housekeeper or wage earner who supports herself and is often helping to support a family, on meager wages, has a hard time. She is a grocery store, shop, store or kitchen woman. Should remember that there is one tried and true remedy for the ills to which all women are subject—Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It promotes that vigor which makes work easy. The Lydia E. Pinkham Medicines Co., Lynn, Mass.
