On their return they will settle on the farm of the late Donald Mann of the 3rd line, Exeter.

Important Suite for Rural Mail

It is strictly against the rules of the Post Office Department to distribute bills or any kind of mail matter in rural mail boxes unless full postage is paid thereon and carriers are instructed to collect all such deposits and deliver these at the post office where they can be sorted as dead letter mail.

This is a point in connection with the rural mail delivery system that is not generally known, and we give a piece of information. Any person, however, can deposit a full prepaid letter or parcel in a rural mail box for any patron along the same route and it will be delivered by the carrier as if mailed at a post office. It is necessary, however, that the carrier deliberate or defer the stamp before placing it in the box to which it is addressed.
