A MILK SHOWER

"Why don't you send John ?" The boy raised himself on his allow and listened. Had he been drauming! Pertiane. Hut he was wide awake new: there was the light streaming through the halfopen door of his mother's room, "I am almost suro it was mother's voice which said : 'Why don't you send John?' Now father is saying something I cannot understand, he speaks too low; but mother will make a roply protty soon and there is no danger of my not catching her words I wouldn't listen, but I know they must be planning something about me. It may be that they intend to send me away to school with Course Tom, and I am very sure I don't want to go."

Again came his mother's voice, this time ! with an unwonted tone of asperity: "I constipation for over five years, and feel buggy inquiringly. know-I know he doesn't like the milk It my duty to let you known that your business. Holikes it, though, just as well Milburn's Laza-Liver Pills have cured as you liked leaving college in your Sophomore year and taking up farm work be- faithfully may that they have saved me cause you thought it your duty, and John can take hold of your work a few weeks for the very same reason. He is now six- the flow of bile to act properly on the teen years old and I am afraid that he has bowels, and thus Loop them regular. baver in his whole life done one single Irregular bowels are the main cause of thing just because it was his duty to do it. Be careful, dear, that you don't spoil him with kindness. You say that this route is the sesiest one of all, and the idea that you must hire an extra man this year, when crops are so poor, while you have a son who is pariectly able to do the work, is to me not only almost but wicked."

As ble mother's voice council, John threw bimalf down on the bed again. He did not try to hear his father's roply. He know that it did not matter, for he detected f bis mother's tones her determination to have him do that, to him, dostostable work and she was sure to carry the day. always did when she really set out for it. Over and over her earnest words rung in his sare : "I am afraid that he has never because it was his duty to do it." He, and he only knew how true they were. Then shud get a man's pay." he reviewed his father's life. He know the story in every detail; his leaving college to lift a mortgage from the farm at his father's death. That one circumstance had made of the delicate, book-loving boy a farmer. Then came the fall which had lamed him for life. So he took up dairy farming and owned the largest milk route in the city. Now here was this accident which had left him with a broken right arm and the necessity of giving to some one size, for a while at least, the driving of one of the wagons to the city. Then John thought of his own sixteen years of easy, shaltered life. He had nover fed a horse, or used a hoe, an ax or a spade ; and while other farmer boys in the neighborbood had trudged to the village school, he had been given a home and buggy for his own use, knowing that when he returned home with it at night there was a man ready to unhamess, food and water the animal, and clean up the buggy if need be for the next day's trip. But now to go around town driving the milk wagon, doubtless meeting many of his high-school mates. He sat up in bed with a very flerce determination. He would run away first. atlama "milk poldler" written all over to any 'Excuse me,' whon you walked in T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont. bim. He deserved no credit for study. ing; that was a joy to him. Then his father's insudible words coased, and his mother exclaimed bitterly : "It's no worse for him than for you. Your nature lequite | gogue as refined and sensitive us his. Indeed, I am aure that you are much more of a post Let him try it a while; it will do him good to learn exactly how the income is obtained which brings him his life of case."

The father made an indistinct reply. But the boy said to himself florosly, "Yes, mother is right, and I'll show her in the morning that I'm not quite the mollycoddle she takes me for." Then knowing that the milk wagons left the barn at an early hour, he turned over resolutely and went to sleep.

"Well, this isn't so bad," said John bimself on the following morning as h drove laleurely through the cool and stately city streets.

His father had told him to take his tim as the route was among the people who did not breakfast early. Hetween the stops he studied intently now and then consulting his route book in order to know just where to go next.

Suddenly smid his concentration on his book he heard frantio screams. He caught up the slack roins and halted the horse with an imparative "Whos!" The next instant he saw coming towards him, dashing along the sidewalk in frantic haste, something which seemed like a moving mass of fire. A second glance and he know that it was nothing more or less than that terrific thing, a child swathed in flames, In an instant, holding one of the big cans in his arms, he was on the walk pouring the enowy fluid over the burning child It was enough; the flames were extinguish ed. Aroused by the child's screams, a growd had gethered and the father, who lived but a few doors away, came running to them. Picking up the souked child who was still crying, though not so loudly he selled out :

"O, my hoy, you have saved my haby's

He bore the child away. Three men started for a doctor, and the remaining people crowded around John to commend him for his timely dead. The boy escaped from them as soon as possible and turned the horse toward home. Bince the milk

WHY YEAST IS NEEDED

Why is years used in broad ? This question may sound foolish to most housewiver. but let them try to answer it scientificially before passing judgment. In the dough from which bread is made there is a lot of sugar which contains carbon, bydrogen and oxygen. It is necessary to ferment this augur to make broad edible, and yeart is used because it has the power to do this. It is made from the plant having this quality. Fermenting auger is equivalent to burning it, and there are two results. One is the formation of carbonic gas. A and some of it escapes into the air. The part that cannot excape causes the dough to rise and make bread light.
