VISIBILITY OF COLORS

William Churchill, a scientific specialist in the field of lights and colors, states that red is universally used as a danger signs because it can be seen further than any other color, and, seconding to the Helentific American, no matter how distant, red never cases to look red. This is not true of any other color, though a good greet fairly approximates it. Vellow light is visible much further than the distance at which its color can be dis tipiculahad, and is easily taken for i "saighboring light."

In normal weather, a large red light, i raised high secough, is visible at a distance of three and one-half miles; yellow, one and one-half ; green, three miles; and blue and purple, three-quarters of a mile and a variety known as "lunar white," two and our half miles.

YOUR CHOICE

The Atlanta Constitution has this salvice to give all workers. "You young men, o middle aged mon, or older man, had best take note of the signs of the times and make up your minds that in this day and generation it to your drink or your job. You may compromise with your conscience, or laugh at the oraquiar temperance orators, but you cannot fool the man with your job on his bande.

There is nothing emotional, nothing isolodrematic about the onward march temperance from this source. It is just the bold logical economic business argument that gives a man the alternative between his potations and his position. The rail roads ushared in the ere, for manifest reasons. The crusade has spread from vocation to vocation until it includes about every major means of making a livelihood."

THE DANGER OF OVER-CONFIDENCE

"You notice," wild the man who keeps his eyes open, "that it is the good awimmera who are most likely to drown." There is plenty of food for thought in that simple sentence. It is the good swimmore who are most likely to be drowned, and all because they accept risks that the Indifferent awimmer would never think of taking. The consciousness of strongth may be a danger. Just as the skilled swimmer ventures too far from shore, so many a youth plays with temptation because he foolsuure he will be more than a match for it. litteen Moves an Hour Is the Rule In Championship Games. What is the average lougth of time that a chess player in an international champlonalily contest takes to move? Among more human players there are many traditions of how these poors of the game scorn to make a move in loss than an hour; nay, more, how they consumo whole evenings and oftentimes days in a single move. Buch

Now, in hard fact, these superplayera move more rapidly than the everyday expert. The common limit in international championality matches is afteen moves an hour; a player falling to get within this limit loses the game no matter how commanding his posttion; an average of four minutes to the move la considered ample time. Inloed, when Capablanca challenged Lasker for the world's champlonally he was held to be justified in refusing Lunker's condition that the limit be lengthened to twelve moves an hour. In champtonship games a chous clock is always tweel. This has two dials, each dial controlled by a plunger. Inmediately after black has moved white strikes his plunger, which starts the hands on ble dist recording time. At the lastant be moved be striked bla plunger again, builting the mechanism.
