SOME OBSERVATIONS

After about thirty-three years of service the town hall bell is retired in favor Hon. Hobt. Rogers' new clack bell. During that time it has rung the workers to an from their toll, and helped to shook w many a home clock. In its ordinary wor as a time indicator, allowing an average o about asventy strokes to the ringing-and for some years there were one hundredthere have been nearly two million, eight bundred and eighty-two thousand nine hundred "dings." ELECTRIC LIGHT BULBS.

Why the Delicate Filament Becomes Heated to Incandescence. In the bulb of the ordinary electric sup used chiefly for house light there is a thin filement of metal wound on what is called an arbor. This diament is so prepared that it offers high resistance to the passage of the current of electricity, and because of this it is boated to incandescence when a current passes through it All the air having boon extracted from the bulb in its making, this provents the motal from burning up, as it would do foxygen were present

Vegetable fiber was used for the filemout of the first incandescent lamps. The next development was the celluloss process, which is still used in carbon and metalized lamps, although a number of processes are used now to improve the filament. The discovery that tungston metal could be used for this figurent in incendescent lamps was made as recently as 1000, and the first tungaten lamp was made in this country in 1907.

At first the tungsten filaments were composed of what was called tungaten paste that made an extremely fragile wire. The new process now used produres a strong wire under pressure, finer than the finest human bair. They run up to 8,000 candle power.

A SKELETON IN THE CLOSET

The Lagand From Which the Wall Known Baying Was Yaken. The origin of that singular and wide quoted saying, "A skeleton in the loset," which is found to stmost every language in Europe, is found in one of those curious collections of stories that have come down from the middle ages. In one of these collections, compiled by an unknown hand about the middle of the touth century, there is a story of a wealthy lady who, having a secret grief, confided it to a friend who was apparently a perfectly happy woman, lived in his castle in the south of France. Hhe and her husband were cotwardly on the most toving terms. Not a care cloud seemed to cast a shadow on her path.

After hearing the story of her amicted friend the noble lady took her by the hand and led her to a secret chamber adjoining her bedroom, there opened the door of a closet and exposed a skeleton. "Know, my friend," she said. "no one is happy. Every day I am forced by my busband to kies this grinning death head, which is that of a gentlemen who was my husband's rivel and whom I would have married had not my parents willed otherwise." On the Moon. The question "Could a man live on the moon?" has been put to an eminent astronomer, who replied: "I am afreid not. A man transplanted to the moon would find himself the lone inhabitant of a perfectly lifeless orb in which sternal silence reigns. He would have to manage without air, water or fire. He would not need to put windows in his house, for there is no wind, no rain, no dust, upon the moon. It has been truly and practically observed that the moon is apparently abandoned to death, nourishing no inhabitants, producing nothing resem-

which drage the sea into tides and refacts the sunbame in moonlight." Baked Men. Workers in porcelain factories are literally baked, but by some miracle they remain sufficiently undoug to live. At least if they are not quite haked they endure a stronger heat than that which browns the Sunday siriols. The furnaces wherein procelain is dulated any industry. A chain of workmen, their heads and bodies swathed in fireproof garments, take the finished places from the fire one at a time and pass them to the cooling room.
