CRABS IN FULL DRESS

Some Speales Are Fond of Finary and Clotha Themselves Carefully. Many of the emb species of shelldsb clothe themselves. Some species dress elaborately by taking small pieces of different colored weeds and sticking them on the shell, so as to look like a stone covered with weed. They spend hours, with the utmost persaverance, in making these pieces udhere, by try-till they succeed. They have a fine cause of symmetry and always put a red place on one limb to match the red place they have put on the other. and a green place to match a green place, though how they know red from green in the dark pools where they live to bard to say, unless it is by taste or small. When once their dress s completed it improves the older it becomes, as the weed actually grows

Another species, with like liabits and a most docided love for tinery, was described at a meeting of the Linnsean society, as clothing themselves with bits of bright colored seawced, sponges, and so forth. If the crab be despolled of its garments it at once proceeds to clothe itself again with care and deliberation, manifested not only in the selection of its articles of apparel, but in the proper shaping of them by means of its pincers.- London Brects-
