But this I know, my Havlor walks with me, And that's enough. From morn till eve, from youth till uge, From birth till death, I know he turns the opening page,

And grants me breath. Bo o're the sun le in the sky I ask for grace, From every ovil thought to fly, And sook his face.

His love my stay, his word my guide, I need not fear, For he has promised to abide

Forever noar. And I shall surely reach my rest In that dear home: There's welcome for each saul oppressed

Beneath that dome. And though I tire upon the way And scarce can sing. I own his scontor's royal away

And crown him King.

-Zion's Horald. ON MAINTAINING APPEARANCES

There was once a woman who found herself suddenly thrown on her own resources. Fortunately, the resources were there. She sold all that had made her life beautiful and decorative and took the proceeds to buy useful things that in turn she might sell those and earn a livelihood therewith. Out of the wreck she kept but one expensive thing-s very beautiful and inderful fur coat which her husband had given her in the days before his life and his fortune had terminated abruptly. The woman had a little baby to support and the only means she found available was to go up to the wilds of the north and introduce a line of knit goods to the shopkeepers there. The fur coat, "she felt, would save her from colds and pneumonia which might endanger her own life and so her baby's means of support and life as

Besides, she was quite sure that the charming appearance that fur coat would enable her to make, however cheaply she was clad underneath, would be distinctly an asset to her in business.

The first town to which she came housed a large store which har employer had told her was good for a thousand dollar order and a ten per cent. commission to her. She went in to see the proprietor, and could not quite decide whether he admired her aweaters and shawle and haby's jackets or whether his admiration was all for her beautiful fur coat.

Finally, after he had examined her goods thoroughly, he told her to return the next day when he would have made his oholoo between her line and that of a competitor. The woman had no doubt of success, for the competitor's line was inferior inquality | Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

If the truth was only known you would find that over one half of the ills of life are caused by allowing the bowels to get into a constipated condition, and the able cause of constipation is an inactive liver, and unless the liver is kept active you may rest assured that headaches, isundice, heartburn, piles, floating specks before the eyes, a feeling as if you were going to faint, or catarris of the stomach will follow the wrong action of this, one of the most important organs of the

It is becoming recognized that human energy in the United States, up to recent times, was expended largely on turning into money the natural resources, without much effort to conserve the source of supply. The young men and women who are now coming to the front will pay far more attention to the duty of replenishing these supplies. The subject of conservation of natural resources is well worth the study of young men who aspire to isaderablp in a comparatively new field.

A ourloss will has just been settled England containing a morel worth a wider elroulation than a miser's last testament often obtains. The poor man died, when to general surprise it was found he left $170,000. The $150,000 in a package, Married Life," explained Mrs. Strongsigned and sealed, was to be given to his brothers, and five thousand to a friend with whom he had quarrelled. It was stipulated that nose of the four should follow the body to the grave, which suggestion the three brothers gladly socepted, but the quarreller walked alone, and forfelted his $5,000 for the sake of paying a last mitigating honor. When the package was opened for the town it disclosed another will, giving the $180,000 to any the four who should disregard the stipula-

I early found that he was some-thing more than the politician. In one way and another, even when the battle was raging, when the Opposition press did not shrink from ascribing to him the worst of motives, there was revealed a tenderness and a generosity of nature of which few were cognizant.
