THE PARTS OF A MAN

When can a man buy a cap for his knoe, Or a key for a lock of his hair? Can his eyes be called an academy Boosuso there are pupils there? In the crown of his head, what jame are Who travels the hillyo of his mose? Can be use when shingling the roof of his

The nails on the ends of his toos? What does he rales from the alle of his tongue? Who play on the drums of his care?

And who can tell the out and atyle Of the coat ble stomach wears? Can the crook of his allow be sent to jail And if so, what did it do? How does he sharpen his shoulder blades I'll be hanged if I know-do you?

A CLOTHES PHILOSOPHY

"Yes, I've been in this business nearly thirty years now, and there are some things I've learned from it that go deeper than my needle can pierce."

"I've learned, for instance-" the he tent once more to inspect the hem she we planing-"I've learned that an ounce time spent in making it right in the fire place is worth a whole ton of time spent in making it over. Bometimes folks just won't stand ten minutes for a fitting, who have to stand whole hours for a reflet ing. Vanny thing human nature is When there's something new, we just can't wait to get into it, whether it's a dress, o a job or a house or a philosophy. But one we're in, we sometimes can't wait to get out. And when the refitting begin we're always finding that we've sorimped here and been too lavish there and made some mistakes that can't be made right, no matter how hard we try. O, refleting's no fus. It's nice to cut into a fine new place of goods; but I never do without wondering if, after all, I've decided on just the right pattern and won't be sorry I didn't pick some other. It must be something like that choosing a life work. Don't you ever get scared for fear you'll make a mistake and not choose the right pattern-you young falks who have a choice? After I've made up my mind and out into my goods I alwayago a little bit slow about puttlag in tastings. They can't be too close or too firm, or they won't come out well to make way for the last stitching. In your preparations for life don't you ever fluid yourself putting in too fine testings? course you want them to hold but not ! hinder. It seems to us that you have to make so many so sort of superficial preparations, gathering up workly wisdom that will have to come out later to make way for more permanent things. It must be hard for you to know just how loose to make your bastings. I do love handwork. Machine work never quite takes the place of it in my notion. I guess it's the handwork that our fathers and mothers and teachers and friends put into us that adds the little beauty touch here and there. Without them-well, we'd be just "common stuff.' And then those finishing touches; I always love to put them on, to make sure everything's just as it should be. I mean it reverently, dear; but I like to think that the dear Lord himself put the finishing touches to our lives. I guess we can reat pratty sure he'll make everything all right for us. There now it's al Iready to

A PERSONAL QUESTION

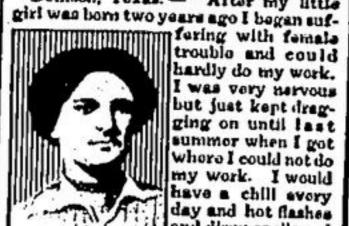

A party of strangers were visiting at the college. It was in the late fall, and the air was crisp and cold. One of the men bere of the party, a charming young woman was escorted through the grounds by a learn ed but absent-minded professor. Suddenly two members of the track team, accounted for their sport, passed.

"It's drealfully, cold" remarked the young woman, with a dainty shiver, as the gazed after the runners, "to be without
