EDITORIAL NOTES

PLANS are under way for the establishment of a dyestuffs manufacturing plant in Canada. It will probably be located in Ontario. This will prove an important industrial departure, in view of the fact that Germany has controlled the market in dyestuffs, her monopoly seriously embarrassing the world's manufacture of colored goods since the war opened.

IRON ORE shipments through the Soo Canal during June totalled 9,507,000 tons. This is a new high record in history. Since the opening of navagation 10,615,000 tons have passed through enroute east to United States and Canadian plants. These figures indicate two things, the enormous activity of the iron and steel industries, and the busy season for lake freight companies.

SIR SAM HUGHES, Minister of Militia, stated at Ottawa the other day that he is assured from confidential sources that the riot at Borden Camp last week was engineered chiefly by London liquors dealers, who want the troops sent back to London. It is deplorable that liquor interests have only their own selfish aims at heart. They are evidently ready to sacrifice any other interest in their lust for gain.

ACTON CANDIDATES SUCCESSFUL

Miss Minnie Bennett, Entrance Teacher, Made Clean Sweep With Her Pupils

33 WROTE HERE; 25 HAVE PASSED

Acton Public School has for many years maintained exceedingly high standing at the annual examinations for entrance to High School. This year every candidate in the entrance class was successful, and eight of them took honors. This splendid result reflects credit upon the school, upon Miss Bennett, the painstaking and superlatively teacher of the entrance class, and upon the pupils themselves.

The list of Acton pupils is as follows:

GEORGE E. DUFF WILSON, (Hon.)
ELSIE STEWART, (Hon.)
KENNETH HENDERSON (Hon.)
ISABEL E. ELLIOTT, (Hon.)
NEIL W. GIBBONS, (Hon.)

Miss Williams deserves credit for her success in passing four out of five who wrote from Dublin School. Miss Williams is herself a graduate of Acton High School.

S. S. No. 13, Esquesing
MINNIE E. COLE
Miss A. R. Uren, Teacher.

S. S. No. 4 Nassagaweya

S. S. No 7, Nassagaweya

Miss B. M. Evans, Teacher.

Of the thirty-three candidates who wrote at the entrance examinations at Acton twenty-five were successful, as above named.

Those who won highest standing here were George E. Duff Wilson, Elsie K. Stewart, and Kenneth Henderson, all pupils of Miss Bennett of Acton School.

The honor of winning the highest marks in the county at this examination is due to Miss May French, a pupil of Mr. R. F. Sanderson, Principal of Oakville School.

Unsuccessful candidates will receive their marks at once and certificates will be mailed to those who passed. Any appeals on behalf of candidates who failed must be made to the Chairman of the High School Entrance Board, Mr. Ralph Ross B. A., Georgetown, not later than August 20th.

In view of the fact, however, that the papers of all candidates who almost reached the pass mark have already been re-read by the Board of Examiners, it is unlikely that any appeal may be sustained. An appeal beyond the Entrance Board may be made to the Deputy Minister of Education on paying a fee of $2.00 which fee will be returned if the appeal is sustained by him. Such an appeal must be made before September 5th and should be made through the Public School Inspector.

A. has a large tent, not far from our lines. A number of our Acton boys attend a bible class held there. I will send you a copy of our camp paper as soon as we get them.

A VISIT TO WISCONSIN

Interesting Story of a Trip to this Progressive State Whose Motto is "Forward"

When regular home-staying citizens go awaying for a jaunt they are far more apt to talk of it than those to whom frequent trips of perhaps thousands of miles are quite usual. Having "broke out" for a few days, I feel that a rush into printer's ink might interest myself, if no one else. And besides, there may not be many FREE PRESS readers who go to Wisconsin.

Not having seen my son, Freeman, for over six years I got my ticket to go to his home at Stevens' Point, in the above state. I may just merely state for the information of his former schoolmates in Acton, that he is in the telephone service there being now Wire Chief for the district of which that city of about 12,000 is centre. His duty is to locate "troubles" on the lines, and send the repairs. I may also remark for the encouragement of Acton School Board that the Continuation School here was the means of his entrance into the preliminary service of this business, which steadily followed, has been successful. While the number of students who finally finish the course here is comparatively small to the number of entrants, owing to the necessity for wage earning, there is no telling the value of even a few years in the High School course.

The crops along the way were no better than in our own community. The same evidence of wet weather in seeding and early growing time were everywhere apparent. Hay, of course, appeared to be good all over. The level country between Pt. Huron and Chicago had much water, still in sight in the fields. The splendid motor roads laid, even through marshy country, stretching away into the distance marks the advancement of this recent method of transportation.

It took just about 23 hours—from midnight to midnight, on limited trains; including two hours between terminals in Chicago to reach my destination, Stevens Point is a divisional point on the "Soo Line" from Chicago to the Twin Cities. Also at this point the Wisconsin River is crossed by a bridge which I paced off at 197 paces. Over this bridge all the vehicular traffic crosses on the "Yellowstone Trail," going from New York to Yellowstone Park by this particular route. The way is marked by yellow patches on the telegraph posts. There is no other vehicle bridge for twenty miles southerly and I know not how far northerly.

Not far south of this point the late Robt. Brown, Sr., who died here a few years ago, had taken up land before settling on the farm he occupied so long near Acton.

The country is very sandy, and potatoes are the great standard crop. Large warehouses are erected by the tracks for storing the tubers, and systematic methods of planting and harvesting are used. Strawberries are also a very profitable crop.

The city is a very fine one with excellent paved streets; but those on the outskirts unpaved work up deep in the sand.

Churches of all our usual denominations are maintained, but have much to contend with, owing to lax Sabbath observance and the liquor traffic. About forty saloons cater to the thirst for the beer which is manufactured in two breweries, fourteen of them being located around the market square. True, the saloons are closed on Sunday, but picture shows and pool rooms are open, as well as some other places of business. The motor travel on Sunday is immense, both local and touring. In cases, even farmers and teamsters seem to think Sunday work necessary. A large element is of foreign extraction, having had customs of their own, which of course emphasizes the situation. The Polish district is very important and they have a large church with tower and clock.

There are many large public schools, a High School, and a State Normal with over 900 students. As I frequently try to see other schools and grounds than our own, I inspected this property. There were numerous supplementary classes in session.

There is a large Academy under R. C. control, with highly walled grounds, and a Sisters' Hospital, erected by public subscription, to which all classes are welcomed.

I had the privilege of attending a Fourth of July celebration, and thought as I walked on the crowded Main Street pavement, what must be the experience of life in the trenches when the explosions behind my ear were so distracting. There was a trades procession, including pioneers, and other typical scenes, and a immense Stars and Stripes carried on the shoulders of children, their heads protruding through openings, forming a "living flag." In the evening patriotic speeches were delivered from the band stand on the Court House grounds. In listening to these one might wonder why the nation could be anything but American.

Well, you have it, for what it is worth. If this account is "small potatoes" to you or your readers, all right. I had a nice outing, a pleasant visit, and also found the previously untried experience of hearing myself many times insistently addressed as "grandpa" by a very stirring juvenile.

Told of the War Office.

A certain officer of the Royal Horse Artillery, having his battery divided into half-batteries, which were garrisoned over forty miles apart by road, applied that he might have an allowance granted him for an extra charger, it being his duty to frequently visit both portions. The War Office ruled that this allowance was inadmissible, saying: "Measured by the Ordnance map, as the crow flies, the distance is found to be only thirty-three miles and a half." For a time the officer was nonplussed, but an idea struck him, and he seized his pen and wrote: "There would appear to be some misunderstanding regarding my application. I am asking for allowance for an additional charger, not an additional crow. I do not ride a crow; I ride a horse!" He got it.

Capturing Elephants.

Rounding up elephants is in progress in several places in India. At Bukna nine elephants have been captured and one of them a huge beast, refuses to eat in captivity. Six were sent on to Chalsa, where one of them charged the other elephants, and bowling over one of them, killed the mahut. The other day a tusker charged the only camping ground in the Tendu forest, but fortunately a European assistant prevented a panic. Not long ago a herd took possession of the short branch line from Latiguri to Rajashahi. The driver did his best to frighten them off, but at the last moment one of the animals made for the engine and damaged it slightly, though it was itself thrown off the line, and is believed to have broken a leg.

They Got the Drug.

A smart seizure of a large quantity of cocaine was effected by the Customs authorities on board the steamer Lai Sang, at Calcutta, recently. The drug was cleverly stowed away in a recess in the bow of the ship and covered over with planks, the joints being neatly cemented to avoid any suspicion. Somehow or other the freshness of the repair attracted the notice of the preventive officers, who had the planks ripped open and found the cocaine mentioned. It is believed that a regular traffic of this nefarious drug is carried on from China and other places.

A WORD FOR MOTHERS

It is a grave mistake for mothers to neglect their aches and pains and suffer in silence—this only leads to chronic sickness and often shortens life.

If your work is tiring; if your nerves are excitable; if you feel languid, weary or depressed, you should know that Scott's Emulsion overcomes just such conditions.

It possesses in concentrated form the very elements to invigorate the blood, strengthen the tissues, nourish the nerves and build strength.

Scott's is strengthening thousands of mothers—and will help you. Try it.

"PRICKING" THE SHERIFFS.

The King Performs the Ceremony With a Golden Bodkin.

The recent quaint announcement that at a meeting of the Privy Council the King "pricked" the sheriffs recalls the ancient customs, privileges, and duties connected with the office of sheriff. In early times the sheriff, whose office is of great antiquity, was chosen by the inhabitants of the shire or county. Edward II., however, put an end to popular elections of sheriffs, and enacted that they should be assigned by the Chancellor of the Exchequer, several judges, and one or two other officials.

This is now met at the Law Courts on the morrow of St. Martin's Day (November 12th) and there nominate three gentlemen for the office of high sheriff for every one of the counties of England and Wales, except Middlesex, the sheriff of which is elected by the citizens of London. For Cornwall the sheriff is nominated by the Prince of Wales, as Duke of Cornwall, while for Lancashire the sheriff is appointed by His Majesty, as Duke of Lancaster.

When the list of nominated sheriffs has been completed by the officials already mentioned, the names are engrossed upon a parchment which is brought before the King, who then, with a golden bodkin, pricks through the parchment against one name for every county. The names thus pricked, however, are usually the first on the list. It is a curious fact that the office of sheriff is not only gratuitous, but compulsory, for if the person appointed refuses he is liable to be fined.

Tale of a Horse.

A horse called Jack was one among many employed at the erection of Waterloo Bridge. The horse was accustomed to draw the stone trucks along a tramway to a place where the stones were required. A bearhouse was, of course, erected near the works for the special use of the navvies and other workmen.

The driver of Jack's truck was an honest sort of fellow named Tom, who had one special weakness, an inability to pass the bearhouse without taking a little. Jack was so accustomed to this, though a restive animal, he waited contentedly till Tom came out of his own accord or until the appearance of an overlooker startled the man into activity.

On one occasion, however, when the superintendents were absent, Tom took so long a spell at the ale that Jack, because restive, and the trace fastenings being long enough the animal put his head inside the alehouse door and, seizing the astonished Tom by the collar with his teeth, dragged the lazy man out to the truck. Every man there understood the action of the horse, and great became the fame of Jack amongst the host of workers.

It Couldn't Last Long.

The late Dean Pigou had a fine collection of stories, and he loved to retail them. One concerned the verger, who was a latitudinarian in matrimonial matters. It was his business to settle all questions connected with banns, and he was examined with severity when it was found that he had allowed the dean to marry a man to his deceased wife's sister.

"Well," he replied, "one of the parties was eighty-four and t'other eighty-six. I says to myself, 'Lord, it can't last long—let 'em wed, and t'other the lawful.'"
