THE TASK THAT IS EASY There is no satisfaction in the task that is too casy. The small boy who finds delight in reading is not the one who sticks to words of one syllable. but the lad who plunges into the fascinating tale of adventure, bristling with mysteries in three syllables. And the same principle holds all the way along. There must be something to master and something to perplex us in our daily work if it is to continue to appeal to un. The best way to make our work wearisome to the point of disgust is to stick to the task so easy that it deands nothing from us.

CASTORIA MOLYBDENUM IS VALUABLE

The more one learns about molybdenum the more one feels that Canada, which is the principal source of this metal, has in it a product quite as valuable as nickel, if not more so. Molybdenum is now used as a substitute for tungsten or vanadium in hardening steel, for which purpose its use is far more economical. It lengthone greatly the durability of gun metal and armor plate. It is valuable in high explosives, and it has other uses in war. But this is not all. It takes the place of platinum in the compounding of chemicals used for dyes, while has also been found effective as a support of the filament of electric lamps. Its possibilities, however, are only beginning to make themselves known.

THE LUXURIES OF WAR

The war in bringing about strange demestic changes. The other day a woman with a shawl over her head entered a plane dealer's plup in Yorkobite, saying she wanted a plane. The milennian healtatingly augmented a sound instrument at £25, expecting thus to end the inquiry, "Not that," said the woman phortly, "a real offe." Taken aback, the man more boldly indicated one at £60. This was thought better, but not "up to the mark," and another at £80 or £00 was also disintered as inadequate. "I want one o' them with a big, broad top." A grand! Now beyond surprise, the salesman pointed out the cheapent of that order at £130. "That's more like it," said the customer; and then, reassuringly, "Aw've gut t' brann," produced at the same time a sufficient roll of notes from the receases of her clothing. A lady district visitor to whom the story was told followed the grand shortly after to its cramped, now quarters, where such splender had never been seen before. It was safely installed, filling the humble room with its bulk and the family with pride. "But they can't make any use of such a thing," declared the perploxed salesman when the visitor reported to him. You, they can," insisted the lady. They were having their dinner on it." -From the Manchester Quardian.

Curlous as to the history of the cugs, Mr. Clague wrote to Mr. Urton for information, in reply he was told that the eggs were sold by Mr. Urton 14 months ago at 20 cents a dozen. "You can tell your grocer that, he is sure making use of the high cost of flying," added the Haskatchewan man.

Advertising-An Investment

Advertising is an investment--not an expense-and should be treated as such. Because it has been the habit of some merchants to look upon it as expense, a wrong view has been gained. Perhaps the misconception arose from the fact that in book-keeping it has been the habit to charge advertising to expense. Advertising produces new business--it swells the volume of business and profit-therefore it is an investment. Only the man who looks upon advertising as an expense, who is afraid of it, prejudiced against it, loses money in advertising. The man who treats advertising as an investment and gives it the attention an investment requires--knows that every dollar rightly invested in this direction yields compound interest--and more.
