DOES IT PAY TO DO RIGHT

And did you say a bishop is a big man? There is an article of more than passing interest in the Watchmanthe question, "Does It pay to do right?" and answers it in the affirmative. He takes James J. Hill as an example and attributes his unusual success as much to his righteourness as to his business ability and hard work. But the "gladness' one finds in doing right and the escape from worry and fretting to even a greater reward for upright living the author thinks, than is the money gain that is sure to come. Most people think that it pays to do right so far as the next world is concerned. It is hard Robert Noble, Limited takes my old gun and goes out into the for them to see that it pays in this
