NEGLECT

Every newspaper, every periodical and every public speaker mentions and orates on the "High Cost of Living," so called. This has gone on for years and with redoubled energy since the war made further spectacular boosts in the prices of foodstuffs, piready seemingly as high as they could go. And what reduction has occurred in consequence of all this agitation? Nothing, absolutely nothing. . The increase continued. Apparently what the public would like is to see beefsteaks at twenty cents a pound and bacon at a quarter. We know now that this is impossible. Why not try a new: Let's be a consumer for a mo ment. Our incomo is strictly do: fined at a certain amount per week. It's just snough with great care to make ends meet by the time rent. clothing, fuel and food is provided for, and of the food bill the meat cost is an extremely heavy drain. We try everywhere but prices are pretty much alike Is there no way we can get around thin heavy expense? Let's see now how about The Consumer Hunts for Fish-Mrs. Consumer goes out to hunt up the fish possibilities. At Jones' shop she sees some haddles lying in an open box in the sun at the. front, uncovered, a prey for the flies and a receptacle for dust. Does she full upon the aforementioned Jones and press silver upon his palm and accept in return one of the uneightly fish? Nay-Nay-Pauline. Slowly and sadly sho wonde her way to the most man and purchases his product, even at a high price. Meantime Mrs. Number Two Connumer reaches another shop. A hox of freah caught fish has arrived a few hours previously. Were they nicely arranged to best adcarefully side by side in an ice filled platter in a show window, or special lee bex? They were not. Mr. Brown led her to the box, just us they arrived. The bex naturally was rough, water soaked, ice gone, fish
