"FACILIS DESCENSUS"

A gentleman of large means and athletic build, says the Scottish Advertiser, built a handsome mausoleum for himself in the parish churchyard. It was a massive piece of masonry and presented an aspect of considerable strength.

ADVERTISING IN JAPAN

Among the entertaining bits that a traveller noticed in his study of Japanese newspaper advertising are these: "Goods dispatched expeditiously as a cannon ball."

SHE GOT HIM

"We hear a lot of talking about the shortage of marriageable men on account of the war," United States Senator Charles McNary, of Oregon, is credited with saying, "and I guess it must be true, judging from a proposal I just heard of from my state. Have you know the girl worked it on her husband's suit? There goes our I wish you'd hand him a five." Let me do it, exclaimed the youth, unsuspectingly, in a fervor of benevolence. "Oh, Archie, this is so sudden," bubbled the sweet young thing, and what chance did he have?

MISREPRESENTATION

THE ADVERTISER

I am an Advertiser! I think pretty well of myself! I have Ambition! I have All-Right! I have Friends! I have Experience! I have Honor! I have Ingenuity! I have Ideas!

All these things I am using every day for the betterment of myself and of my business to the end that I may be able to say in future years: "I have Prosperity, and a Well-established Business, one that I am proud of," and yet that I can say, as now, "I have Friends! I have Honor! I have still my own Self-respect! An opinion of myself that must demand recognition in this World of Business."

I am an Advertiser! Because of this I am known to stand for the things that I believe in; that I do; that I believe others should do; and the things that will always be done so long as there remains in the World One Man who is strong enough to say, "I believe in Myself and in my future!"—By William M. Adrian.
