FARMER JOE

Farmer Joe was a real broke. Farmer Joe had a really broke. And his wife was early. Better than the farmer Joe. Never shouted "Tally-ho!"

When the air was crisp and free And the leaves were falling, He and his wife went for a walk. And the hunt was calling. Better than the farmer Joe. Never shouted "Tally-ho!"

Open heart and open hand. Hearty laugh and mellow. Horn and head upon the land. Simple, honest fellow. Better than the farmer Joe. He did hunt will never know.

TWENTY YEARS AGO

From the issue of the Free Press of Thursday, August 31, 1919

We have had three weeks without rain.

Some farmers are already busy with fall seeding.

St. Alban's Sunday School held a very enjoyable picnic in Mr. John Warden's grove Monday afternoon.

Toronto Exhibition is in full blast.

Acton Crescents are champions of the Royal Highland.

Three and four hundred citizens accompanied the Crescents to Waterloo last Thursday to witness the game between Acton and Galt.

The score was 6 to 1 for Acton.

The victors were welcomed home by many of our citizens, and there were a number of occasions led by Acton Cornet Band which escorted the victors to the Town Hall where congratulatory speeches were made by D. Henderson, M. P., Warden Havel, Councilor Francis and were responded to by President J. H. Matthews.

THE NEWSBOY'S DOG

An unusual occurrence at the City Dispensary at St. Louis is reported by the Globe Democrat. The narrative will be appreciated by those who like dogs and boys. It does credit to all concerned, including the doctor.

Little Joe put his head cautiously through the half-opened door of the City Dispensary yesterday. He looked and looked at a scared sort of way. Little Joe is the Four Courts newsboy. He pushed the door open wide, and hobbled in as well as his one leg and crutch would allow. Then he held the door to allow the doctor's little dog, all the more disreputable-looking because he was wet with the morning's rain, to limp in after a weary walk on three legs, and was about as scared-looking as little Joe. Doctor Newcomb was on duty at the time. To him little Joe went.

"Please, doctor, fix up my dog. He's hurt his foot."

"Is he your dog?" asked Doctor Newcomb.

"No, sir. I reckon he ain't nobody's dog, but he's hurted just the same; and if you'll fix him up I'll take him home till he gets well."

Doctor Newcomb didn't operate on canines as a rule. In fact, this was his first case, but little Joe's big, heavy-lidded eyes made him consent. The dog was lifted into the doctor's lap, and an examination was made of the right foreleg which was swollen and sore. All this time the dog never made a sound, except to whine, when the broken bone was pulled into its place. He seemed to know that what was going on was for his own benefit. Doctor Newcomb put him down on the floor, and he gave thanks in the only way he knew how, by wagging his tail.

But little Joe had a more substantial reward than that to offer the doctor. He pulled out a dirty little book and a stub of pencil. Then he laboriously spelled out the doctor's name and wrote it down in irregular characters.

"I haint got no money, doctor," he said, "but I'll bring you a paper every day. Much obliged, doctor, and with that the two cripples, the boy with his crutch and the dog with his leg in a splint, limped out into the rain.

A HEARTFELT WISH

Gen. Sir William Birdwood of the British army is an officer who can talk in a familiar way with the men in the ranks without patronizing them or doing anything to lessen discipline. In his account of "The Dardanelles Campaign" W. H. Newton illustrates this quality in Gen. Birdwood by telling a story of the scarcity of water suffered by the troops in that campaign, particularly among the Anzacs.

The water was carefully rationed out into water-bottles or tins," Newton writes. "I am sure that a man was fortunate if he got a mugful for washing and shaving."

"Having a good clean up," said Gen. Birdwood, in his friendly way to an Australian thus engaged. "Yes, sir, the man replied, and I only wish I was a bloody canary!"

WHOLE-HEARTED RECREATION

Be whole-hearted in your recreation. Do not take a walk with a lagging step, or as if you were on your way to the hospital for a surgical operation. Do not listen to a concert with your thoughts on to-morrow's work or next week's examinations. One reason why our recreation does not remake us, as the term implies, is that we do not enter into it heartily enough to give it a chance. Recreation properly chosen deserves as close attention as if it were work.

GO AND DO IT

It is wonderful how many hours prompt people contrive to make of a day; it is as though they picked up the moments which the drawers lost. And if you find yourself where you have many things pressing upon you that you hardly know how to begin, take hold of the first one that comes at hand and you will find the rest falling in line like well drilled soldiers.

A man, when asked how he accomplished so much in life, "My father taught me," was the reply. "When I had anything to do, to go and do it."

Commonplace Passage

8. This Daniel purposed to his heart that he would not defile himself with the king's dainties, nor with the wine which he drank; therefore he requested of the prince of the eunuchs that he might not defile himself.

9. Now God made Daniel to find kindness and compassion in the sight of the prince of the eunuchs.

10. And the prince of the eunuchs said unto Daniel, I fear my lord the king, who hath appointed your food and your drink; for why should he see your faces worse looking than the youths that are of your own age? so would he endanger my head with the king.

11. Then Daniel said to the steward whom the prince of the eunuchs had appointed over Daniel, Hannaniah, Michael, and Azariah:

12. Pray thy servants, I beseech thee, ten days; and let them give us pulse to eat, and water for drink.

13. The countenance be looked upon before thee, and the countenance of the youths that eat of the king's dainties.

14. So he hearkened unto them in this matter, and proved them ten days.

15. And at the end of ten days their countenance appeared fairer, and they were fatter in flesh than all the youths that did eat of the king's dainties.

16. So the steward took away their dainties, and the wine that they should drink, and gave them pulse.

17. Now as for those four youths, they gave them knowledge and skill in all learning and wisdom; and Daniel had understanding in all visions and dreams.

18. And at the end of the days which the king had appointed for bringing them in to the presence of the eunuchs, the king inquired of them, and found them ten times better than all the magicians and enchanters that were in all his realm.

19. And the king commended with them; and among them all was found none like Daniel, Hannaniah, Michael, and Azariah: therefore stood they before the king.

20. And in every matter of wisdom and understanding concerning which the king inquired of them, he found them ten times better than all the magicians and enchanters that were in all his realm.

21. And in every matter of wisdom and understanding concerning which the king inquired of them, he found them ten times better than all the magicians and enchanters that were in all his realm.
