Reconstruction and After word anditions, and the Telephone Service.

ELEPHONE service, like other public ecrvices, undoubtedly suffered through the war. Hundreds of skilled telephone workers went overseas. Many trained operators sought temporary positions in munition plants. There was a world shortage of the materials that go to build a telephone system. Our reserves of plant and equipment were drawn upon until they were practically exhausted. Necessary repairs and maintenance work had to wait. Then came the armistice. The business world sprang into intense activity. The demand for new installations all over our system was enormous. Now comes the task of getting back to normal-restoring our reserve plant, overtaking arrears of maintenance and repairs, , hurrying new construction of local and long distance equipment to meet pressing demands for service. Our plans for this year involve an outlay for are giving intensive training in our operators' schools to hundreds of young women to prepare them for central office positions. Our chief concern is that our subscribers should get the best possible service under all conditions. Skilled workers, adequate equipment, a resolve to do our bast, while realizing that we are all servants of the public-these are the factors-which, we hope, will result in the maintenance of the pre-war standard of telephone service.

And we ask the kindly co-operation of all telephone users in-
