Fruit Growing on the Prairies

Long before the advent of the strawberry hundreds of varieties of small fruits grew in the sheltered spots of the great north-west of the American Continent, now known as the Canadian Prairie Provinces of Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba.

Several varieties of wild currants and berries of a most delicious flavor, all found throughout these three provinces, and fruiting in excessive forms of the most delightful character in the hills behind them. In the woodlands, beside the creeks, lakes and rivers, it does not take long during the season for the women-folk and the children to pick sufficient wild strawberries, raspberries, ananassas, red black and white currants, gooseberries, etc., to keep the family well supplied in preserves until the following season.

Where the wild varieties of fruit grow so profusely it is natural to expect that some, at least, of the cultivated varieties will grow equally well; and this expectation has been realized by hundreds of farmers in Western Canada who have made a hobby of growing small fruits. Their success shows that with reasonable care and attention there is an opportunity to develop fruit raising on the Canadian prairies into something more than a vociferous of the horticulturalists. It could possibly be developed into an important industry.

Most valuable information concerning varieties of the different kinds of fruit most adaptable to the conditions prevailing on the prairie has been gathered by the horticultural departments of the Provincial University of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta and by the experimental stations scattered throughout the country. At the University of Alberta, at Edmonton, the fruit growing in the farm garden, it is found that a large number of varieties of currants, raspberries, and strawberries have been grown with excellent success for many years.

At least a dozen varieties of currants have done well, growing very hardily and giving heavy yields of extremely delicious fruit. The Castle, Ideal Cherry, Red Dutch and Stewart have proved to be about the best of the red kind, White White, and the Black Maple, Pringle, Victoria and Nutt Star of the black currants. Several varieties of red, black and golden raspberries, particularly the red, have also been grown with success at Edmonton. The Sunbeam and Culbert are the favorite raspberries.

Their flavor is fine; they yield heavily and have a long season. The varieties have also been very successful. The Caroline has proved to be the best of the yellow raspberries. Blackberries have not been so satisfactory as the red and the yellow at Edmonton, but in other parts of the country they are being grown with more or less success.

Strawberries are quite at home on the Canadian prairies. They are found in the most popular of the small fruits grown in the farm garden. It

THE AMBITION TO BE RICH

The ambition to be prosperous is commendable. The ambition to be rich is foolish. After one's income meets a certain amount, it gives as much satisfaction as it would if it were doubled or tripled. The occupations suggested by the very wealthy to get rid of their income, prove this sufficiently. It is impossible that they should find any pleasure in the silly, absurd extravagance which the newspapers chronicle with headlines. After all, though a man may have half a dozen expensive houses scattered over the country, he can only live in one of them at a time. No matter how many dresses a woman may have hanging in her wardrobe, she can only appear in one at any given moment.
You can not only about an inch in twenty-four hours, and if you exceed the limit and feed yourself too richly, nature exacts a penalty.

Do not plan for "poverty." A healthy ambition requires that we should do our best to get our share of life's good things. But do not aim to get more than your share. Do not be unhappy of burdening your spirit with trifles.

BUNFLOWER BILLAGE

Professor George Hilton, of the U. S. Department of Natural Resources, says that the growing of sunflower for silage will increase the value of farm land in Alberta. It is found that sunflowers will produce from three to four times the food value of alfalfa on average soils. The yield is thirty tons as compared with three or four for alfalfa, and according to the Canadian Experiment Station two and a half pounds of sunflower silage equals one pound of alfalfa hay in feeding value.
