

WHEN DAYS ARE DARK

When days are dark, remember... The brightening of the day... And that of the sun's smile...

Room Number Fifteen... Frederick E. Burnham

I AM very sure, were I in your place, that I would decide to accept the position...

It was about three months before Whittemore knew that the professor considered him such a "lucky fellow"...

There was nothing more brilliant about Whittemore in the classroom, but he soon ranked with the keenest of the students...

Whittemore was very prudent with what little spending money he had. In truth he had no money...

"You are too close for me, Ames," remarked Bert Cole, with a broad grin...

The evening day came a box from home. Having opened it, Whittemore found within a most tempting array of home-cooked food...

It was about two o'clock that afternoon that a smart rap on the door brought Whittemore to his feet...

"You are not much more than half through now, are you?" said Whittemore to the professor...

"Oh, Ames, Milinda, Doris cried, 'I want to see you for a few moments after we close up to-night'...

"I have the entire day to myself," replied Whittemore. "To tell the truth I was feeling rather lonely when you came in today, Ames."

"I have the entire day to myself," replied Whittemore. "To tell the truth I was feeling rather lonely when you came in today, Ames."

mentioned Albert to a great head he him. "What do you say to being manager of the store, for the present, of the new store?" queried Mr. Saunders...

"Why not?" "Why not, I'm only a clerk!" gasped Albert. "Yes, but a very accurate one," replied Mr. Saunders...

"I can tell you, Mr. Whittemore," replied the professor. "He is very favorably impressed with you. He told me so less than fifteen minutes ago."

"That evening Whittemore wrote Mr. Saunders a letter or article. Two days later came a reply, and that letter told him although many years have passed, it is a most highly-prized volume which is safely stored away in the safe of one of the leading physicians of Massachusetts.

"I am going to take your advice," said Ames Whittemore, the white standing beside the solitary window of Room Fifteen...

"You have made a wise choice," remarked the professor solemnly. "I have showed this room to fully a dozen Freshmen to-day, but they all turned from it with a look of disgust. You, Mr. Whittemore, you have made a wise choice."

It was about three months before Whittemore knew that the professor considered him such a "lucky fellow". Then it was that he was summoned to the office of the president of the college...

There was nothing more brilliant about Whittemore in the classroom, but he soon ranked with the keenest of the students. It was long hours of study which accounted for his progress.

Whittemore was very prudent with what little spending money he had. In truth he had no money, and he was determined to keep clear of debt...

"You are too close for me, Ames," remarked Bert Cole, with a broad grin. "I don't believe you have spent five dollars for fun since you came here."

The evening day came a box from home. Having opened it, Whittemore found within a most tempting array of home-cooked food...

It was about two o'clock that afternoon that a smart rap on the door brought Whittemore to his feet. Thriving with the professor, he was greeted by the same professor who had shown him Room Fifteen the day that he accepted the position...

"You are not much more than half through now, are you?" said Whittemore to the professor. "No, I am not," replied the professor. "You are doing very well for a young man."

"Oh, Ames, Milinda, Doris cried, 'I want to see you for a few moments after we close up to-night'." Mr. Saunders just as will was about to go to the door...

A MOTOR CAR FOR WINTER USE

The Wharton John describes a newly-developed motor car, remodelled in a Durham garage for winter use.

It is what might be called a "winter Ford." It was built for travel over snow roads and its ability to do this was demonstrated by the fact that it made both current and gooseberry plants in pretty bad in some places, it came all the way without having to be pulled out by any power but its own.

The Wharton Ford has been practically built in the Durham garage. The chassis has been cut down so that the rear wheels are now the same width apart as the front and outer runners. The front wheels are replaced by runners which are moved by the same steering gear as was used to turn the wheels of the car.

On the outside of each rear wheel a steel tractor wheel is fastened. This steel wheel is not so large in diameter as the ordinary car wheel and so does not touch the ground unless the car wheels sink into the snow about three inches. Then these steel tractor wheels pull the car out of the rut.

Although the car is rather rough in design, the idea is a first-class one and if developed might prove itself worthy of being developed in commercial numbers.

Dread of Asthma makes countless thousands miserable. Night after night the attacks return and even when relief is given the mind is still in torment from continual anticipation.

Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Asthma Remedy changes all this. Relief comes, and at once, while future attacks are ward off, leaving the afflicted one in a state of peace and happiness he once believed he could never enjoy. Inexpensive and sold everywhere.

Gooseberries ordinarily are propagated by means of runners. The plant from which layers are to be procured should be cut off heavily before it begins to grow in the spring. By July it will have sent out numerous runners in diameter at the base. Not one should be allowed to grow to the top of the shoot. By autumn the runners should be cut off and set in the nursery, to be grown for a year or two before being planted in the field. It will be better to leave the shoots, attached to the parent plant for a second year.

The following is one of the traditional methods of growing gooseberries in Scotland. Thirty years ago a baronet, a rugged uncle presented to his nephew, the principal partner and asked for work as a servant boy.

"There's a deal of running to be done," said Mr. Blank, jumping to get a broad Scotch accent. "Your qualifications 'd be a pair of shoes."

"I've got a pair of shoes," said the boy, "but I've got to buy a pair more. I've got to buy a pair more. I've got to buy a pair more."
