THURBDAY, JUNE 28, 1923 .

SHINE JUST WHERE YOU ARE Don't waste your time in longing For bright, impossible things;

Don't sit suplanly yearning For the swiftness of angel wings. Don't spurp to be a rushlight. · Because you are not a star; But brighten some bit of durkness

By shining just whole you are.

There is need of the tiniest candle As well as the garish sun; The humblest deed is ennobled When it is worthly done; You may never be called to brighten The darkoned regions afar. So fill, for the day, your mbalon By shining just where you are.

Just where you are, my brother, Just where God blds you to stand. Though down in the deepest shadow. Instead of the sunlight land; You may carry a brightness with you That no gloom or darkness can mar, For the light and a Christ-like spirit be sitting wherever you are. Eva Williams Mulone.

EVIL SPEAKING

"It la contomary for people to talk," but we should refrain from speaking evil of others. Evil speaking - was prevulent in the days of the Baylour, in the days of the Apostles, and in every generation. A man once wrote and published in a newspaper false and sourillous things'about John Wesley, thinking he could get him drawn into a newspaper controversy. He mot Mr. Wesley one day and asked him if he saw and road what he had written about him. "Yes," was Mr. Wesley's To watch its broad waters roll reply. "And will you not unawer it?" "No, for if I wrestle with a chimney sweep I will only get smutted." Mr. live down to the end of time.

Has'tt over occurred to us that the whole creation of the lower animals is deprived of the power of speech? Among men dumbness is very much When sleeping and tired on the banks around, as was her custom, to ask the exception ruther than the rule, because God would not rub man of this glory, this distinguishing attribute which connects him with all intelligence, and brings him into sympathy For my faithful deg Bounder with his fellowmen that he may catch the exact line of his thought, the pulse of his feeling and the gtatus of his Yes. knowledge " When we think of the wonderful power of the tongue-for good or for will we do not wonder that St. Paul and St. James had so much to say about it, and gave directions as to the proper use of it.' It has power to convey instruction, sympathy, and consolation. It can elevate or depress, narrow, and cramp, or enlarge and beautify. And we know not which we could spare the best the hand or the foot, the eyes, ear or tongue, for they all fill a wonderful place in the marvelous structure of man, which has no peer in the universe of God. How guarded then we should be as to its use? Look over the circle of your acquaintanceship, and what is the character given to those who are, without knowledge or proof, speaking evil of their neighbors? Are they devoted, plous, beavenly minded? Do they observe the injunction, "Only let your conversation be as it becometh the gospel of Christ?"

· But what is evil speaking? 1. To expose another's faults without a good intent. 2. To recite, thoughtlessly, unsupported stories adverse to another's character. One writer designates them 'whisperers." They go about retailing the last item they have heard, and in an undertone they enjoin secrecy-"You must not say anything about it. don't want my name mixed up in it." What right has a person to come to you and make you the secret custodian of his tales? The law of libel makes quick grip of open slander, but there escape the fine tooth comb of the law. and their paradise is a country village of a hundred people where everybody knows each other's business. Some one has embodied this conduct in the following lines:

Not a great while ago. A woman we know,

Richard Sherlock, referred to in my contribution last week, may be mentioned an incident, which is not of very frequent occurrence in these days. In his boyhood he lived for a time wards Everton, who had no other inmate in the home. Richard was sent to the usual house of supply of bread to get Sunday's necessities, and was autorised to be told it was already Sunday evening. Everything had been struightened up at home in readiness for keeping the Babbath, and now the bread was about all gone. The old that he had worked all day Bunday, and he rigidly kept the Monday following instead, allowing no work to be done, and spending it in reading, bill for wasted attentions; worship and especially humiliation and

The chorus of one has ever remained: "Oh happy pligrim bright and fair," etc. Three preachers secupled the platform and look part n the services !. who, I believe, were Elders Kilgour, Royce and Black. The latter, I think, was the preacher, and who also addressed a candidate for lenmersion in the afternoon. Many years afterward, at a funeral service, I saw agula the two former, but oh, how changed with yours. Father Black had gone, The Disciple Church at Everton has always been one of the strongest of the denomination, and its membership came down into the Cornore community on far us the Bopers and Crippe families, / Parther down they trended to Acton.

On a later visit, to be definite, July 3, 1876, I accepted an invitation to go down the line that Saturday evenlag, to the fine stone house on lot No. 2 where the Dockray family were living. This tine fronting farm had a history much further back, which may be bet ter supplied to the "Old Man" c lionicles by the oditor, for I think his mother's girthand was partly spent there, and from there she went a bride with her exteemed husband, Edward Moore, of Actor. Hut on this partioular occasion the visit was to enjoy some plane music by the lady of the home. Very few homes then had even an organ, much less a plane, and for a neighborhood to have such an intrument and such a player was "c, .. to a note." The Dockray family, I t dink, had not long come from England, and, having means, were disposed to enjoy them. They had the first parrot ever saw. In fact, I think it handbeen understood that Mr. Dockruy's farming did not recompense him for methods employed, and after farming himself a While, and leasing on shares, he removed to Toronto, and finally indeed a marvellous player. I ca never remember seeing such skilful manipulation of the keys. The head of the house was a jolly old gentleman, and when the musical lady swung for any favorito piece, he laughingly told of a young man duce so asked, who thought a moment, and then asked for "The dead march in Saul!"

Buch a request illy comported with Mr. Dockray's disposition. This friendly couple were at Acton when I, went to the home, but soon after arrived, and in the course of the evening remarked that "they have started a paper in Acton." Even in remote regions, the once. familiar figure of the peddler is rarely seen. In the cities the brass-lunged buckster has practically disappeared.

Advertising has banished those wornout hangers-on of trade. Through advertisements, women learned discontent with the limited choice offered by the peddler's pack and the huckster's cart.

Advertising teaches us to be more exact in judging values; to require things to measure up to better standards; to make better use of every cent we spend.

Advertising has done away with haphazard choosing by shooing how wide and precise a choice you really can have. Haphazard buying is going the same route. People who read advertisements know what is what--and they make sure they get it at the right price!
