

AT CHURCH NEXT SUNDAY

If I know you, and you know me, How little trouble there would be...

Each one intends to do what's fair, And treat his neighbor on the square...

This world is sure a hard place, And we must live in the race...

We have an interest in our town; The dear old place must not go down...

Don't knock and kick and slam and yell, At everybody on the street...

At church next Sunday.

MR. PEASLEE CLEARS THE DECKS

"Where's Caleb?" demanded Deacon Hyde, peering and blinking from the door...

Mrs. Peaslee wiped her hands deftly upon her apron and whisked open the door of the oven...

"I don't believe you'll get the wheelbarrow," she added.

Mildly wondering, the deacon bent his steps toward the smoke.

It was indeed a load! There were barrels with staves missing, chairs with only three legs...

"What you tryin' to do, Caleb?" the deacon asked.

Caleb paused to lower the wheelbarrow and to mop his face vigorously with his denim sleeve.

"My wife's give me many a talkin' to about it," he continued.

"But yesterday when I went to use my sulky plough and found it rickety to the point where I couldn't turn the moidboard over I come to a realization...

"So I've been doin' it," said Caleb, taking up the handles of his wheelbarrow again.

"But," said the deacon, pointing to a second pile of broken furniture that was heaped as high as a man's head...

"What's your idea of havin' two fires? Why not burn it all in the one hearth?"

"I am always favorably impressed," an employer said recently, "with an applicant for a position who is able to make a direct answer to a direct question."

The friend in whose the business man was confiding, showed his surprise.

"Apparently not," the other answered. "I have some questions which I use to test that your quality. Young people tell me their spot and their age with satisfactory directness, but when I put certain other questions, they begin to give me this sort of a reply, 'I don't know as I ever thought about that.'"

"What is your explanation of that peculiarity?" asked the friend.

The answer was emphatic. "Lack of straightforward thinking. People who are always twisting and turning to avoid an unpalatable answer, lose the ability to face facts. They who are not willing to face facts will also be unwilling to meet the consequences to do so."

THE OLD MAN OF THE BIG CLOCK

ACTON'S JUBILEE CELEBRATION LATE ROBERT LITTLE The Beloved Schoolmaster, Acton, 1868 to 1872

It was getting up, and he wanted to do the best he could. He decided to try Toronto, and moving to Parkdale, he secured work on street repairs...

Not because they have forgotten. Sometimes young people fancy that those who exercise authority over them are parents, teachers, guardians, and the like, have forgotten what it means to be young.

But not a place of special fear. Or square squabbling on the roof. Come to the barn's broad open door. You hear upon the stable floor...

The barn is old, and very old. But not a place of special fear. Or square squabbling on the roof. Come to the barn's broad open door.

Nothing but simple wane and change. We were in the old man's shoes. Your will fall on silence undisturbed.

Down the line, under the bridge on the Nasasagwaya side, was the farm of the old man, and saw to it that he had a stone house himself, being an exception to the old saying that "the blacksmith's horse and shoemaker's wife goe to the devil."

THE IDEAL PLACE

Papa—"And do you think for one moment that that clerk of mine was in a position to propose to you?"

Daughter—"Why, certainly, papa; he was on his knees."
