Two Men Returning to Water Were Intoxicated While Driving Car

On Sunday night when Inspector Keeves was returning from a visit to the Gore along the Brantford side-road, he came upon two men who were eastbound on the fifth line that was wobbling backward and forth in the roadway. The Inspector stopped the car and found two men in it who were evidently pretty drunk. Opening the door, he found the key but the occupants realized what was going on.

Afterwards it turned out that the men in the car were father and son, and one of them was from Acton, who were returning home from Acton with a jag they had acquired in that district from a native product. There was a sample in a pint bottle sitting unbroken on the seat between the two men.

When the two men realized that they were under arrest they became ugly and one of them kicked the Inspector in the pants. The key was taken from the car they could not proceed and were quickly arrested.

The Inspector held them in the coupe until another car came along and had the driver to go for a farm house and telephone for help.

The chief went out as quickly as possible and found the Inspector holding the elder Mills while the young fellow was skipping across the fields.
