Why then I know it's spring. When rustling corn begins to flaunt Her tassels in the air, And glowworms glimmer in the night.

When goldenrod and iron weed Mid breezes gently sigh. And Jack frost nips the pumpkin vines, Then autumn's passing by,

When snowflakes softly one by on Begin to kiss the earth, I know that winter in her robe Of glory's given birth.

"Tis summer everywhere."

The Lesson Explained 1. The Separation of Paul and Barnabas from One Another, 36-41, While Paul was going on with his work of teaching and evangelizing in Antioch, his thoughts and heart kept going out to the converts he and Barnabas had made on their first missionary journey, and so when he could no longer contain himself he said to Barnabas one day, "Let us return now and visit the brethren in every city wherein we proclaimed the Word of the Lord, and see liow they fare." The heart of Barnabas too went out toward their converts and he readily assented to Paul's suggestion. But here one of the saddest things recorded in the All observant visitors have a good Acts of the Apostles occurred. Barnabas made up his mind to take Mark

An occasional stray cow about town along. This was against Paul's best judgment. Mark had been given a fair trial on the former journey and had failed them at a critical moment. Surely it would not do to experiment in that direction again. Missionary nabas put affection for a beloved relative (Col. 4: R. V.) above the interest of the work and stood firmly by his ill-advised determination; just here is where many a true servant of God has made a mistake that has wrought keeping at least enough stock to supply the interests of the Kingdom of God.
