THE GOOD OLD LAZY MAN

I know a dear old lazy man Who roams about all day Whose head is full of happy thoughts

And pleasant things to say. He wanders through the sunny street And lingers hero'and there To watch the children whom he meets,

Or smooth some baby's hair, And when he finds a lonely child, Or one that's fretful grown,

He takes it gently by the hand. As though it were his own,

And hand in hand they stroll away

Along the pavement wide, First down the block, and then acros Then up the other side.

He helps the children at their games, And knows why each one wins, He tells just what day top-time ends

And marble-time begins. He is no mýth from fairyland, Nor prince in pauper's clothes,

But just a dear old lazy man -Whom everybody knows. And if you keep a sharp look-out.

And note each one you meet,

some day you'll see the lazy man

Come strolling down your street.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

FOR SUNDAY, OCTOBER 25

Golden Text-Fon the love of money the root of all evil. 1 Tim. 6: 10. Place-Ephesus.

The Lesson Explained

1. A Religious and Commercial Riot in Ephesus, 23-34. Paul had wonderful success in Ephesus (verses 10-12, 18-20). He must also have testing before he leaves. It might seem to us that it would have been better for Paul to leave in the full blaze of his success; but God looks at these things quite differently from what we do. The Gospel "Way" is sure to create a stir sooner or later. Men do not realize all its bearings and all its demands at once, so they receive it quite calmly. But Denetrius will wake up to the fact that it touches his business. The gospel faithfully and fully preached will stir up any community, at home or abroad. It is not necessarily a bad sign at all when things begin to boil. in city, village or church? It may be simply an indication that the fire is getting hot. The stir came because the new religion affected business (verse 25). Reforms and revivals are all right if they do not hurt anybody's business. If they do, why, of course, "business is business," and the reform and the revival must go. "The love of money"-what a prolific mother of evil it is. The Sunday newspapers may be great curse, but then the Christian merchant must advertise in it; for you see, "by the business we have our wealth:" There are many applications. Let us see if we cannot find one that will hit ourselves. Demetrius uttered a very striking and truthful, though entirely unintentional, commendation of Paul (verse 26). Would that we had more Pauls that would persuade people that they should turn away from the worship of false gods, and "serve the living and true God; and to wait for His Son from Heaven" (1 Thess. 1: 9, 14). Paul was, of course, entirely right in saying that "they be year, sold out on Tuesday to Mr. Neil no gods which are made with hands." Demetrius does not attempt to prove that he wasn't, but simply points out that this doctrine would have a bad effect upon their business. He was like many to-day who wish the preacher to square his preaching not with the word of God, but with financial considerations. The first and the chief danger was injury to business; but there was another; poor Dlana was imperiled (verse 27). It is doubtful if Demetrius really cared much for her but he knew that an appeal to religlous prejudice would carry many with him whose co-operation he greatly desired. There are many to-day who become very enthusiastic rollgionists if they can coin money out of it or go into office. His statement that all of Asia and the world worshipped Diana was hardly consistent with his professed apprehension concerning her; nor was it exactly true. Some were enraged because they saw their business going to pieces; some because "Great is Diana of the Ephesians!" gone out of use, even in our day.
