> Majority for Hillmer There was a good deal of excitevote. Mr. Hillmer's friends were counting on a big majority. The most sanguine workers looked for 200 of a plurality over Mr. Pettit. The Conservative headquarters here counted on about 150 of a majority. When the summing up of the ballots at the Town. Hall showed a majority of 38 for Mr. Pettit, they were nonpulsed, and naturally downhearted, but when the figures for No. 2 came in, showing that Mr. Hillmer had a majority of 69 there, there chagrin was somewhat modified. It was, however, rather humiliating to have to report to headquarters at Milton a surplus from Acton of only 29.
