

THE WHISTLE
You have heard, said a Youth in his sweatshirt, who stood,
While he blew a horn,
at daylight's decline.
You have heard of the Danish boy's Whistle of wood?

And what would you do with it?
Will you use it?
While an arch smile played o'er her beauty?
Would you blow it in an answer,
And would
here take her place?

As that all you want for? Why, that Without any reason?
A favor or a slight, and a good-natured
And the glacially sented breath by his side of wood?

What a cool of yourself with your whistle?
To there and thence, for what you might take?

The Right Spirit

By ALBERT A. RAND

Mr. Hanson, operator in charge of the little station on the Mountain Division of the Great Eastern Railway, came out of the tiny office,
and stood at once that he had heard the whistle.

On the past year both Frank Hill and Will Arpous had been studying the whistles, with the help of the agents at the station.
Duties were light, and the hours were long.

Frank Hill had been appointed station agent, and he had been in the office for some time.
He was a young man, and he was very popular.

Will Arpous had been appointed
station agent, and he had been in the office for some
time.
He was a young man, and
he was very popular.

Will Arpous had been appointed

he was very popular.

THE OLD-FASHIONED HUGGY

THE OLD-FASHIONED HUGGY

THE OLD-FASHIONED HUGGY

How dear to my heart was the old-fashioned huggy-ride.
When the chime of the old mare
was heard,
When the clatter of the hoofs
was heard,

When the clatter of the hoofs
was heard,
When the clatter of the hoofs
was heard,

When the clatter of the hoofs
was heard,
When the clatter of the hoofs
was heard,

When the clatter of the hoofs
was heard,
When the clatter of the hoofs
was heard,

When the clatter of the hoofs
was heard,
When the clatter of the hoofs
was heard,
