What makes jelly jell?

Pruite contain, in varying amounts, buth bugar and a certain jollying substance, but no fruit contains enoug of either to jellify all of its juico. That is why you used to have to "boil your fruit down," or concentrate it, until it had lost a large amount of its juice-and unfortunately much of its fine fresh flavor and beautiful color as well.

But now you can add jellying substance as readily as you ado sugar to your fruit. For Certo is the jellying element of fruit-refined and bottled for your convenient use. With Certo only one or two minutes' boiling is enough to give a perfect, tender jell. You cannot have a failure, and your jelly retains the delicate, luscious flavor of the fresh front and its bright natural color. A book of simple, tested rempes comes with each bottle of Certo.
