Accidents Increasing This Year

In the first six months of 1927 the Workmen's Compensation Board awarded $2,901,801.00, of which The total number of accidents reported to the Comwhich 186 were fatal. These figures also show an increase over the same period in 1920, when there were 29.631 accidents reported, including 147 fatallties. During the month of June, 1027, there were! 6446 secidents reported to the Board, of which 47 were fatal, these figures being the highest for any month in 1927. According to R. B. Morley, General Manager, Industrial Accident Prevention Associations, injuries reported usually originate from one or sometimes two major causes, the first being lack of safe conditions, while the second is identified with the human element associated with lack of training, with inattention, thoughtlessness and occasionally what looks like indifference. As an example, Mr. Morley cites the case of four workmen engaged in cutting out the section of a floor. These men commenced at - four corners of the square and, when the floor had part of all concerned.

· The Vacation Days

People these days are divided into two distinct classes, those who can have vacations, and those who can not. Those who cannot are manifestly more numerous than those who can, yet as the country increases in prosperity and the struggle for existence become less severe, the number of those who are able to take a week, or possibly two weeks, for rest and recreation, grows larger. No one needs this rest from exacting labor more than the tired housewives who keep no maids. There are dozens of this class to every one who has a maid. Such vacations as they get are hard carned, and richly deserved. Wagecarners, those who work for some one else, on whom largely rests all the responsibility for the success of the business, should have a week or so of vacation each year. The proprietor of a small business cannot usually leave for any extended period without injury to his trade, and the average housewife has no one to take her place if she goes away for a rest. Hight? If the family cannot all get away together, all should conspire to give mother a rest at this season. The human machine will run a long time without rest, but it will eventually break down. It is the part of wisdom to take a rest before it is too late. In the present time of shortening a day's or a week's work for mechanics and clerks the fashion of vacations is spreading. Let us hope that it will are receiving the welcomes due them on their trip ultimately extend until no tired worker is without a to Canada, meeting us with our problems, and telling We had arranged for a fish-speardesirable periol of respite. The news despatches recording the lamented death of Kevin O'Higgins, the distinguished Irish Pree State legislator, at the hands of assassing, tell of Mr. O'Higgins dictating his last will and testamen't while approaching death.
