HOME

The garden I love's at the foot of the hill,
Where roses and hollyhocks bloom as they will;
And a rosy-cheeked toddler patrols to and fro,
And pulls up the pansies to see how they grow.

There, red rambler roses climb over the door,
And the scent of the gorse steals along from the moor;
There are stocks and forget-me-nots, pinks and sweet peas,
And columbines curtseying low to the breeze.

And when I come home and my day's work is done,
The cottage gleams gold in the glow of the sun;
And the woman I love, whether early or late,
Is watching for me by the little white gate.

TWENTY YEARS AGO

From the Issue of The Free Press of Thursday, December 12, 1907

G. A. Black is advertising for fifty men to cut cordwood at $1.10 per cord.

The mild weather early in the week induced some of the farmers to resume plowing.

Messrs. W. H. Storey & Son continue to run overtime. There is no business depression there, evidently.

A special Advent Service will be held in St. Alban's Church this evening.

The annual examinations in the High and Public Schools will be held on Friday afternoon, 20th. A cordial invitation to attend is extended by the teachers.

The drama and concert, given under the auspices of Acton Lodge, I. O. O. F., No. 204, was favored with a large house. The five-act drama, entitled "The Social Glass or Ruined by the Bottle," was of a temperance character, and the parts were well taken. The different characters in the cast were taken by the following: Charles Ebbage, Stephen Hornby, Leslie Rice, Harry Jeans, George Hynds Jr., Murray McDonald, Bessie M. Johnstone, Marie R. Robertson, Jean H. Hynds, William Coleman. Mr. C. W. Mason's orchestra supplied excellent music. The Male Quartette sang "The Old Oaken Bucket," and Mr. Eddie Pigott, humorist, of Toronto, kept the audience in laughter between acts.

The company went to Georgetown on Saturday and gave the drama there to a full house.

HOSPITALITY'S OPEN DOOR

The exercise of the gracious virtue of hospitality is peculiar to no one class or people. All the world over the latch-string is out, and the portal of the hovel opens as wide as that of the palace. Mr. N. H. Bishop, in his "Voyage of the Paper Canoe," gives two instances of Southern welcome which go far to prove that cordiality is a matter neither of color nor of social standing.

One stormy evening Mr. Bishop moored his boat on the bank of a South Carolina river and went in search of a night's lodging. He had not gone far when he saw a native feeding a number of hogs, and to him he put his question. The man was ragged, shiftless-looking, and of the species known as "poor white trash." On hearing of Mr. Bishop's need his reply was immediate.

"Stranger, my cabin's close at hand. Come home with me. It's a bad night for a man to lay out in. Come with me."

He led the way to a log cabin plastered with mud and moss. There, over a supper of hog and hominy, the man, his wife and the traveller talked.

There was only one room in the cabin, and Mr. Bishop slept in a bed made up on the floor. In the morning he was puzzled how to remunerate the Southerner. At last he said, as delicately as he could:

"Mr. Edge, you have treated me with great kindness, and your wife has been put to some inconvenience. You will really oblige me if you will accept a little money, though it cannot pay for your hospitality."

The man ran his hand through his thick hair; then he said, slowly but decidedly, as if he represented the whole generous heart of the South:

"Stranger, I have known a white man to be mean enough to take a stranger's money for lodging and victuals, but I'm not that man!"

Later in the voyage, Mr. Bishop put up for the night in the cabin of a Georgia "darky." Every attention was paid to the guest's comfort, and in the morning he offered some money to his negro host. The man refused it with dignity and decision.

"You may gib my wife whatever you please for her cookin'," he said, "but nuffing for food and lodging. I'm no nigger if I is a cull'd man!"

THE DOCTOR'S FEE

An English lad, on holiday with his parents, had the misfortune to dislocate his jaw. His mother took him to the local doctor, who, after a good deal of trouble, put it right.

The mother then asked him his charge. The doctor, not knowing exactly what to charge in a case of this sort, looked up a medical book of charges, and read: "Dislocation of the jaw, one to three guineas."

Knowing that even the smallest of these charges was not likely to be got in this instance, the doctor asked, "Was the boy's jaw ever dislocated before?"

"Aye, wance," answered the mother. "And what did the doctor charge you then?"

"Wan-an'-sixpence!" said the woman.

"Did you not—er—consider that rather a remarkable charge for such an operation?" asked the doctor.

"Aye, we did that!" replied the woman, decidedly. "But we just paid it without grumblin'!"

The Oil of the Athlete.—In rubbing down, the athlete will find Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil an excellent article. It renders the muscles and sinews pliable, takes the soreness out of them, and strengthens them for strains that may be put upon them. It stands preeminent for this purpose, and athletes who for years have been using it can testify to its value as a lubricant.

Mountain Named For Premier Baldwin

1. The jagged peak of Mount Stanley Baldwin. 2. Mount Sir Mackenzie Bowell, a pleasant-faced peak of the Premier Group.
3. Mount Sir Wilfrid Laurier, 11,750 feet. 4. Mount Sir John Abbot, unconquered peak of the Premier Group in the Canadian Rockies, 11,358 feet high. 5. Mount Sir John Thompson with its rugged ice sentinels—Photographs by D. Munday.

Fitting monuments to four former Prime Ministers of Canada and a memento of the visit of the present British Premier, Rt. Hon. Stanley Baldwin, have been set aside in the Rocky Mountains of Canada where a series of peaks have been officially named "the Premier Group, and five of them have been named respectively, Mount Stanley Baldwin, Mt. Sir Wilfrid Laurier, Mt. Sir Mackenzie Bowell, Mt. Sir John Thompson and Mt. Sir John Abbott. The naming of a mountain after Premier Baldwin in honor of his visit to Canada during the Diamond Jubilee year of Confederation was considered a fitting mark of the Dominion's esteem for him.

These mountains lie within the territory skirted by the famous Triangle Tour of the Canadian National Railways, and to the westward of Mount Robson, highest peak in the Canadian Rockies. The peaks, several of which are snowclad, lie about ten miles south of the railway line which runs from Red Pass Junction to Prince Rupert and about ten miles westward of the Canadian National line to Vancouver. Their peaks can easily be seen by tourists travelling on either route to the Pacific Coast. A dozen or more peaks stretch across a territory which extends from the western boundary of Mount Robson Park westward and south to terminate in the foothills of the Cariboo country.

Mount Sir Wilfrid Laurier is one of the most picturesque of the group, rearing its peak 11,750 feet into the clouds. Mt. Sir John Thompson has an altitude of 11,250 feet, and Mt. Sir John Abbott the same. Mt. Mackenzie Bowell is 11,000 foot in altitude. Slightly eastward and nearer the Vancouver line of the Canadian National stands Mt. Stanley Baldwin, which is visible from the station of Jackman.

While these mountains have not been surveyed officially, several of them have been climbed, the most recent ascents having been made by Mr. and Mrs. Don Munday of Vancouver.

CANADIAN PACIFIC AUGMENTS OCEAN CARGO FLEET

(3) S. S. "Beaverdale" gliding down the way.

The market growth of ocean trade between Great Britain and Canada, via the St. Lawrence route, has prompted the Canadian Pacific, in their building estimates for 1927-28, to augment their fleet of freight steamers with five modern twin-screw cargo vessels. The new ships will be of the "Beaver" class and will represent the highest type of express steamer to be used in maintaining a weekly service from London and continental ports, working strictly to schedule and ensuring definite arrival dates.

Three of these steamers have been launched, the "Beaverburn" on September 27, at Dumbarton, Scotland, and the "Beaverdale" the following day at Newcastle-on-Tyne, England, and the "Beaverford" on October 27. Launching of the remaining two ships was scheduled to take place shortly afterwards.

These five vessels constitute five of the ten ships under construction for the Canadian Pacific, the others being four 20,000-ton ocean passenger steamers of the "Duchess" class and the tenth the "Princess Elaine," to be placed in the Pacific Coast service of the company. The ten ships will comprise a total gross tonnage of 135,000 tons and will cost approximately $250,000,000.

The new freighters will be operated out of Montreal, in summer, and Saint John, in winter, to London and Continental ports on a weekly service. Their speed will be 14 knots, maintained in all weathers, and the voyage should be made in 9½ days. Normally the steamers will carry a deadweight of about 10,500 tons or a draft of 27 feet, but should the need arise, as much as 13,000 tons may be carried on the maximum load draft.

The principal dimensions are: Length of waterline, 512 feet, moulded beam, 61 feet 6 inches, depth to upper deck, 40 feet 6 inches, and gross tonnage, about 10,000.

By means of the "Beaverburn," "Beaverdale" and sister ships, the speediest shipping of Canadian fruits and perishable farm produce, will be effected. Fruit picked in Ontario can be placed on the London breakfast table in 11 days or 13 days later in the case of fruit and vegetables from the British Columbia areas. The same rapidity of shipment will apply to cheese, ham, bacon and lard; to cereals, lumber, timber and manufactured articles. Modern refrigerating plants are required for ideal transportation of fruit and perishable produce, and such plants are a feature of the new cargo steamers.

They will give the Canadian shipper a highly efficient, economic service, rapid loading and unloading, cold storage, floating suction and elevator plant for grain, and the biggest market in the world. Greater London, with its 14,000,000 inhabitants, its voluminous barge service up and down the East Coast from Yorkshire to Dover and its waterways into the Midlands, serves at least one-half the entire population of Great Britain, and is continually growing and continually clamoring for more and more overseas foodstuffs. The Canadian exporter will readily avail himself of the opportunities now afforded by the Canadian Pacific's new fleet of perfectly equipped vessels. From his orchard, dairy farm or shed his produce will be shipped all the way by Canadian Pacific organization. It may justly be said that, from the time his box, basket, or bale is packed, to the time it is displayed on the London market, it has been under the care of the Canadian Pacific.

YES, AN ORPHAN

A new member of a Southern legislature asked one of the older men for an interview so that he might introduce his niece's boy, for whom he wanted a job as page. The boy proved to be a dull-witted fellow thirty-five years old who probably was unable to get a job in the little country town where he lived. The new member said:

"There's just three reasons why this boy ought to have this job—as page. He ain't got no father; and he ain't got no mother; and he's a orphan."

Certain morbid conditions must exist in the stomach and intestines to encourage worms, and they will exist as long as these morbid conditions permit them to. To be rid of them and spare the child suffering, use Miller's Worm Powders. They will correct the digestive irregularities by destroying the worms, conditions favorable to worms will disappear, and the child will have no more suffering from that cause.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

FOR SUNDAY, DECEMBER 11

General Lesson Title.—Isaiah Counsel's Rulers.

Scripture Lesson.—Isa. 37: 5-11, 14-20.

Golden Text.—Thou will keep him in perfect peace, whose mind is stayed on thee: because he trusteth in thee.—Isa. 26: 3.

Devotional Reading.—1 Cor. 3: 21-23; 4: 1, 2, 7.

The Text Explained

Isaiah's Statesmanship. — Isaiah's constant advice to the kings of Judah was that they avoid foreign entanglements—that they keep, as far as possible, out of the quarrels of other nations. As God's people, let them remain in quietness and trust in Him. Nevertheless, they were not to surrender the Holy City; and when unjustly attacked they should defy the invader.

Isaiah 36-37.—There is some question as to the number of times that Sennacherib invaded Judah. It has been customary to take the whole of these two chapters as referring to one invasion in 701 B. C., early in Sennacherib's reign. A number of the best recent authorities, however, are convinced that Isaiah 36: 1 to 37: 8 refers to the campaign of 701; but that Isaiah 37: 9-38 is the account of a second attack on Judah, made by Sennacherib shortly before his death, which occurred in 681 B. C. (Rogers' History of Babylonia and Assyria, 6th edition.) Inasmuch as Isaiah's advice to Hezekiah was the same on both occasions, we are able to treat the text of our lesson as if it were one continuous account.

5. — Hezekiah — (Jehovah-hath-strengthened), king of Judah, about 720-690 B. C. He was a patriotic, capable and devout ruler. In the early portion of his reign, against the advice of Isaiah, he took part in two or more rebellions against Assyrian kings, but toward the close of his reign, his relations with Isaiah were very friendly. Came to Isaiah—Hezekiah and his advisers had gotten into this trouble by joining in an alliance of many nations against Sennacherib. Knowing that Isaiah would be opposed, they had kept their plans secret. Now that they were involved in disaster, they appealed to God's servant, whose advice they had ignored, and begged him to help them.

6-7.—Isaiah says:—Do not be afraid of the boastful Assyrian. He will receive alarming news and will go home. Hear tidings—This was probably the report of a fresh uprising of Babylon which compelled Sennacherib to withdraw his army from Palestine.

8.—Rabshakeh — Should read the "rabshakeh"—a prominent officer in the Assyrian army, who had been Sennacherib's special emissarry to demand Hezekiah's surrender (See Isaiah 36: 2-22). Libnah—A fortified city in the hilly country to the west of Jerusalem, not far from Lachish. Lachish—One of the most powerful fortified cities of Judah, near the Philistine border. Its site is called Tell el-Hesy. It was Hezekiah's chief outpost and was taken by Sennacherib only after a terrific seige—which is fully portrayed in Assyrian carvings found in the ruins of Sennacherib's palace.

9.—This verse apparently resumes the narrative after a break of nearly twenty years. He heard—Sennacherib heard. Tirhakah—King of Egypt and Ethiopia, 691-663 B. C. He sent messengers to Hezekiah—Although Hezekiah apparently had given no provocation at this time, Sennacherib resolved on his destruction.

10.—Some echo of Isaiah's teaching must have reached the ears of Sennacherib.

11.—Shalt thou be delivered?—A clever attempt to shake Hezekiah's faith.

14.—Spread it before Jehovah—This was a ceremonial placing of the matter in Jehovah's hands. The letter was probably written on a clay tablet such as the Assyrians regularly used.

16.—Sittest—May also be translated "dwellest" or "art enthroned." Cherubim—Angelic beings, probably personified thunder-clouds. Of all the kingdoms—Hezekiah recognizes Jehovah as the universal God.

The sequel (Isaiah 37: 36-38)—Isaiah hurled defiance in the teeth of the Assyrian king and promised Hezekiah deliverance. That night, the Assyrian army was practically destroyed (probably by the bubonic plague) and Sennacherib fled back to Assyria. Shortly after his return, he was assassinated.

Lesson Themes

Isaiah and the Clever Politicians.—In order to understand this lesson, we should carefully read the entire lesson material. Chapter 7 deals with the situation in 736 B. C., when Ahaz, king of Judah, was attacked by the armies of Pekah of Israel and Rezin of Syria-Damascus. Ahaz was determined to call upon Tiglath-pileser IV. of Assyria, for aid. Isaiah urged Ahaz and his advisers that they should hold aloof from "foreign entanglements" and wait; for Jehovah would save them. In Chapter 31 we are introduced to a new alignment of nations; Israel and Syria had both ceased to be and now Assyria, which destroyed them, was threatening Judah. The leading politicians of Judah were dickering with Egypt, in the hope of forming an alliance with that country against the Assyrians. Isaiah declared that an alliance with Egypt would be futile—that the best thing for Judah was to remain quiet, keep out of trouble as far as possible and trust in God. Chapter 36 and 37 tell us of the Assyrian King Sennacherib's attack or attacks upon Judah. (He probably made two assaults on Hezekiah's kingdom—See the Notes on this lesson. Under these circumstances, Isaiah's advice continued to be: "Trust in Jehovah. He is your only hope." Professional politicians in all ages are liable to show three characteristics. The first of these is cleverness in making combinations of material power; the second is an overwhelming confidence in their own shrewdness, and the third is a tendency to leave God out of their calculations. There is always need of some messenger of God who will proclaim to these petty worldlings that all their Realpolitik policies are vain, if they are not in accord with the Divine purposes. The wisest statesmen are those who trust in God.

The Mailed Fist vs. Steadfast Faith.—Sennacherib sent the Rabshakeh to demand Hezekiah's surrender. This haughty Assyrian officer in boastful language that sounds like a quotation from one of Sennacherib's inscriptions, employing the very titles with which those inscriptions have made us familiar, declared that Jehovah could not save Jerusalem. But the Rabshakeh's boasting came to naught, for rumor of a rebellion in Babylon reached Sennacherib and he had to abandon his attack on Jerusalem. About fifteen years later, we find him again threatening Hezekiah in language more arrogant and blasphemous than before. Hezekiah was utterly terrorized; but Isaiah, now an old man, took command of the situation and replied to Sennacherib's boasts that Jehovah would put a ring in his nose and drive him home like an unruly bull. The Assyrian kings were worshippers of brute force. They were the very personification of soulless power—utterly unscrupulous, utterly cruel. Opposed to the mighty Sennacherib and his arrogant Rabshakeh, was one man who trusted God. Hezekiah and his people had no strength save that which they derived by hanging on the faith of this one man, God's prophet. The victory was the victory of Faith. The destroying angel (probably the bubonic plague) smote the Assyrian army and practically destroyed it in a night.

"The Assyrian came down like the wolf on the fold,
And his cohorts were gleaming in purple and gold;
And the sheen of their spears was like stars on the sea,
When the blue wave rolls nightly on deep Galilee.

"Like the leaves of the forest when Summer is green,
That host with their banners at sunset were seen;
Like the leaves of the forest when Autumn hath blown,
That host on the morrow lay wither'd and strown.

"For the Angel of Death spread his wings on the blast,
And breathed in the face of the foe as he pass'd;
* * *
And the night of the Gentiles, unsmote by the sword,
Hath melted like snow in the glance of the Lord!"

—Byron.

For Study and Discussion

What did Isaiah believe was the correct policy for Judah to follow in its dealings with foreign nations? What was Isaiah's advice to Ahaz when attacked by Pekah and Rezin? What was Isaiah's opinion concerning the alliance with Egypt? Who was Sennacherib? Who was king of Judah at the time of Sennacherib's invasions? Who was Sennacherib's boasting messenger? What did the Assyrians say concerning Jehovah? Have you ever heard similar sneers by infidels of to-day? What was Isaiah's reply? What destruction came to the Assyrian army? What would you say saved Judah?
