OU DON'T HAVE TO TELL IT

don't have to tell how you live much, don't have to say if you work or you play; the true barometer serves in the place; over live, it will show in your face.

False, the deceit that you hear in not stay inside where it first got the start; sinew and blood are a thin veil of to wear in your heart you wear in your face.

ou gamblin' and won in the great game of life. You've been conquered the sorrow and strife; you've played the game fair and you stand on your base—don't have to say so, it shows on your face.

ou dissipate nights till the day is made; one's a tatter, and one that won't lie; a young facial harometer is right in its place; to tell folks, it shows in your face.

ur life is unselfish, if for others you live, what you get, but how much you can give; ou close to God in His infinite grace; don't have to tell it, it shows in your face.

THE IMPOSSIBLE ONE

ts Mary Kingsley, the intrepid explorer, has recently related a personal experience in "The Woman at Home," which she calls the "mountaineer at a cannibal country." Not we ten to add, because a spinner in touch with the matron, but we can't do it to understand her husband.

she, who is well known in the boat. Presently I should look in his best English. Where your husband, ma?" asked after looking at Miss Kingsley cut for him.

"I've got one," she answered.

"So got?" said Sam, paralytic with amazement. After an instant he roared with laughter. "I say to the tote, 'No got husband, ma?'"

No," said Miss Kingsley, furiously; "you don't get much rubber round me."

Me no trade man," replied Samuel, going to fall into her trap for changing conversation. "Why you no got ma?"

Because I haven't," retorted Miss Kingsley.

ut this intense feminine reply to satisfy Samuel, and she had just the name of further questions and comments to be added to the boat. Presently I should look in his best English.

Where your husband, ma?" asked after looking at Miss Kingsley cut for him.
