He acid that he had two weeks' training as meterman. Questioned on his experience by Crown Attorney W. I. Dick, he testified that the motormen are not supposed

Campbell said that the car had left Georgetown at 11.57 on the day in question. The running time to Norval was six minutes for three and a half miles distance. He said the speed of the car was about 30 or 35 miles per hour when

Witness testified that he had blown the whistle four times and had sounded the emergency and my left on the sand Campbell again testified that he had sounded the warning signal at the station. He could not say if Brown look . toon the rear, throwing it into the ditch on the right side. He said that the emergency brake was still applied, but Questioned as to the effect of the brake leaves or grass, would sometimes cause the car to travel further. Asked the speed allowed, he said that it was reduced "Did that apply to this crossing?" asked the Crown.

"Not that I know of." "Were there some other people there?" "There were four boys there. They tried to aid at the car. I thought Brown was his arm, mostly." "I presume you were examined for your eyesight and hearing?" "Yes." Nicholas Jeffrey, K. C., attorney for the Browns, asked how the train was flagged. Campbell said that it was by hand signals

Witness said that the train would not he admitted that although had he applied the emergency sooner the radial would have hit the automobile, its application would have lessened the speed of the radial car. The important point was Campbell's testimony that he had never used the emergency brake for a test and said no one ever had told him the distance in

The next witness was N .- Rodbard .-60 Amherst Avenue, Toronto, the conductor. He said that the motorman was not instructed to make up lost time. He felt the jar of the impact. He said he
