Celebrated in Real Style

The Dunville Chronicle celebrated its thirty-second anniversary in real style. Editor Fry had a new Babcock Optimum press installed and enlarged the paper to eight columns. He also installed the new type face known as Linotype, which has proved so popular with newspaper readers everywhere, and is used in the news columns of THE FREE PRESS. The Chronicle was founded by Mr. W. A. Fry in August 1896 and the paper has always been under his management. The record shows thirty-two years of progress, and besides running a newspaper, Mr. Fry has found time to devote to other interests, promoting athletic activities, especially. THE FREE PRESS wishes the Dunville Chronicle many more years of continued growth, and that Editor Fry may long be spared to guide its destinies.

Canada's Bright Crop Prospects

The reports of the season's crops are extremely gratifying. Crop prospects throughout Western Canada, where wheat harvesting is now in full swing, were never better. Reports from all parts of the three Prairie Provinces—Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta—state the outlook is very promising. The weather since harvesting began has been fine and a yield of about 500,000,000 bushels seems probable. A survey of crop conditions in all three of the Maritime Provinces of Canada—Nova Scotia, New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island—discloses the fact that a bumper harvest may confidently be expected this year. Ontario and Quebec crop reports are equally favorable, and present indications are that Canada throughout will realize a record crop in 1928.

Now Declared Legally Wrong

The point that has long been considered morally wrong was given the illegal stamp by the ruling of Magistrate W. A. Smith at Sandwich last Friday when he declared in effect that the whole business of exporting liquor is illegal under Canadian law. Magistrate Smith was giving judgment in the case against Ward Irey, of Wyandotte, Mich., who was charged with illegal purchase. Irey was fined $200 and costs, in addition to having his rowboat confiscated. Magistrate Smith ruled also that exporters having liquor stored in warehouses at their docks are guilty of being in illegal possession, and that sale of liquor from a stock held in the warehouse of exporters is contrary to the Liquor Control Act. This point, while not involved in the case dealt with by Magistrate Smith, is a ruling the Government seeks in the charges to be heard by Magistrate Brodie. The judgment by Magistrate Smith came a few hours after Mr. Shaver had announced that all the illegal possession charges against export men were to be heard by Magistrate Brodie, and that the Attorney-General had ruled against having them on the docket of Magistrate Smith's court. Pointing out that Irey had not purchased the beer found in his boat from a Government vendor, Magistrate Smith said that the accused had no permit to purchase liquor in Ontario, and therefore must be found guilty of illegal purchase. The court declared that inasmuch as importation of liquor into the United States is illegal, no delivery can be made in that country without a crime being committed against the laws of that land. "Authorities of international law claim," the magistrate's judgment stated in part, "that no law can permit itself to be evaded nor can it consistently with the principles of international jurisprudence sanction the evasion of foreign laws. Thus, if the thing contracted to be done is illegal by the law of the place intended performance, the contract should be held void, wherever it was actually entered into, by all the courts alike." While the liquor men still continue to show fight and declare intentions of carrying the case to higher courts, press reports also give the information that stocks are being shipped back to the distilleries. It is a case of the public insistently demanding a cessation of this flagrant law-breaking that has been carried on for so long. If rulings are not now on the statutes to govern this they can surely be placed there as easily as the rum-runners have found means of avoiding the intent of the present laws. The first step has been taken. It is up to those charged with law enforcement to see the matter properly cleaned up. It is time for the bluff of the law evaders to be called and a show-down made of who really rules.

Population of Canada

The population of Canada according to the latest estimate of the Canadian Government Bureau of Statistics is 9,558,000, distributed as follows: Prince Edwards Island 86,400; Nova Scotia, 547,000; New Brunswick, 415,000; Quebec, 2,647,000; Ontario, 3,229,000; Manitoba, 655,000; Saskatchewan, 851,000; Alberta, 631,900; British Columbia, 583,000; Yukon Territory, 3,500; Northwest Territories, 9,200. When the last decennial census was taken in 1921 the population of the Dominion was computed at 8,788,000 so that the increase since then is 870,000. And still there are some people, mostly ultra political, who howl that Canada is going "to the how-woos," which interpreted means "to the United States."

A Mecca for Tourists

That Ontario is each year, as its fame spreads, becoming a great attraction to the summer tourists is indicated in the fact that the Provincial Department of Highways estimates that more than 10,000,000 American tourists will visit Ontario this year, and spend approximately $50,000,000 in the Province. An influx of 2,500,000 visitors from other countries is expected, bringing the total estimated revenue from tourist traffic up to $100,000,000. From indications already received, the number of tourists this year will be 40 per cent. greater than in 1927. Early this year the Detroit Automobile Club asked the Provincial Department for 10,000 road maps of Ontario. Last week the Government received a request for 10,000 more.

Will Remain in Office

With periodic frequency Premier Ferguson seems called upon to proclaim his intentions of remaining or dropping out of the Premiership. Such declarations would seem to be called forth by the waiting for fulfillment of declarations made at a previous date. Hon. Mr. Ferguson has just returned from a trip to the mother country. Imperial interest will bind him to the Ontario Premiership for a further term, notwithstanding the declaration a year ago that his jubilee, that year, would see his retirement from public life. On re-entering Canadian waters last week, invigorated by a summer abroad, he stated he would continue in the public service for the present and give ample notice before he left. "The people of Ontario have generously given me their confidence and trust and I shall carry on for a while longer," the Premier declared. Like many men who get interested and whole heartedly into public life, the Premier finds that he cannot drop out of this sphere to suit his own personal desires. The broader connection with the old land has evidently brought this point home more forcibly to him.

Three Cheers for the Winner

The Brampton Conservator in this front page article gives food for thought to many towns: "A city paper carries a news item this morning, to the effect that a Pickering industry burned out last Saturday, has already turned the sods for a new location in Milton. Good work, that, for Milton. It makes us wonder whether the industry sought Milton, or whether Milton sought the industry. Good for Milton, and some cheers, if Milton did the seeking. Brampton voted $500 a couple of months ago, to carry an advertisement in a financial paper stating that Brampton is waiting anxiously at the door for industries and that the "Welcome" sign on the mat has been done over in bright colors. Why did not the Pickering industry have a chat with Brampton? Why did not some of the Brampton Council have a chat with Pickering? Is it a case of 'letting George do it,' now that we are carrying that ad in the financial paper. What we begin to think the town needs, is a good live Business Commission, men who are making good in their own lines. A commission of say three men, who would go after, 'compel them to come in,' by making them believe in Brampton. These men need not give their time for nothing. If the Council has $500 for advertising, they would probably be ready to compensate a Commission who would capitalize on this advertising and show some tangible results."

One of the reasons good live Business Commissions, or whatever one may term to call them, do not exist is often found in the adverse criticism they are subjected to. Usually in any town there are men who are willing to sacrifice time and money to further the progress of their municipality. We do not say such is the case in Brampton, however. These men work without remuneration or thought of it usually, and accomplish much good for their communities which often is taken for granted and unnoticed. Being human they sometimes err in their judgment, and it is then that all their good deeds are forgotten and condemnation brought down on their heads. These are the things that make "men who are making good in their own lines" hesitate to take on the added responsibilities of helping town progress. Possibly Brampton's "Georges" are smarting under a reverse. But usually these men come back. They are used to overcoming reverses, and when they do Brampton will catch its stride again. In Milton they give credit to the Business Men's Association for their progress. In Acton we laud and condemn the group known as the Chamber of Commerce. The names matters little. It's the zeal for progress that overcomes the difficulties that counts.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The toll of drowning accidents the past week-end is a bad blot on the vacation period.

Those rumble seats seem to provide an excuse for the average young fellow to hang on to his girl.

The Caledon Electric Co. have sold their interests in the Town of Orangeville to the Hydro-Electric Commission. The trend of consolidation goes on in the smaller fields as well as the larger mergers.

What would seem the final act in the Ferguson waterworks supply is recorded in last week's News-Record when the report of the Council proceedings says the supply has fallen off at the town wells and it is found necessary to "curtain" its use.

Six bottles of beer were consumed by William Culligan, of Chicopee, and James C. Fraser, of Centreville, before starting on a fateful ride that brought death to Fraser and his wife, Doris Fraser, and orphaned their three small children. And yet some people will proclaim that beer never hurt any one, or made anyone drunk.

INSIDE AND OUT

How—Well, did you read the letter I sent you? Office boy—Yes, sir, I read it inside and outside. On the inside it said, 'You are fired,' and on the outside it said, 'Return in five days' so there I am."

TURNING THE JOKE

The late Senator John J. Ingalls is described as having had a quality poetic method of thought and a wonderful flow of language which gave him a charm to all his conversation. He had also a ready wit which enabled him to avoid many unpleasant visitors. In spite of all his resourcefulness, however, a clever young reporter proved himself a match for the versatile Senator.

One day David Lewley, a young Irishman employed as a reporter for a Washington newspaper, was sent to interview Senator Ingalls on a matter of grave national importance. Before calling at the Senator's home Lewley called a barber and was shaved and had his hair combed.

The Senator, who divined the purpose of the reporter's call and did not wish to talk on that subject, came into the reception-room with his watch in his hand.

"I can give you just fifteen minutes," said he. "What can I do for you?"

Lewley put his question squarely, but the Senator answered after the traditional Yankee fashion by putting another. "Young man," he said, "noticing Lewley's sleek appearance, 'do you shave yourself?'"

"No, sir."

"You ought to," Senator Ingalls asserted. "Every man ought to shave himself." Then, in that delightful way which is the mark of a man who is employed by the man who is his own barber, he enlarged upon the economic benefits of shaving and money to be derived from having one's hair cut. He delivered a dissertation on the aesthetic phase of the case, after which he descended to the practical details, and Lewley, who had considered as the best, and highly recommended a certain kind of razor, still holding his watch in his hand, he said:

"I see I have exhausted my time. You will have to excuse me."

And with a twinkle in his eye the Senator bowed him self out.

"You notice the leading article in Lewley's paper was an attractive report of this interview. Lewley's wonderful memory of the 'No Shave' for him to reproduce the Senator's entertaining discourse almost verbatim, at least so nearly as that Senator Ingalls himself marvelled. He told many persons that, although the case, after which he descended to the practical details, and Lewley, who had reported him more accurately than most stenographers did.

"This kind of matter so that the Senator could never draw the interview afterward. Then Lewley sent a copy of the paper to the manufacturer of the razor which Senator Ingalls had so enthusiastically praised, and for months and months the Senator had to grin and sour the sight of his own face accompanied by his own words in broadcast advertisements of that shaving soap.

"The Senator, still holding his watch in his hand, he said, 'I see I have exhausted my time. You will have to excuse me.'"

ANOTHER POOL WANTED

Shortly after 2 o'clock one morning a doctor drove four miles in answer to a telephone call. On his arrival the man who had summoned him said: "Doctor, I'm not in great pain, but somehow I have a feeling that I'm not right."

"The doctor," said the man, "is listening to his heart, and he says you are all right. The man turned pale. "Oh, doctor, if you had better telephone to a clergyman and wire your people," continued the man.

"Oh, doctor, how long do you give me?"

"There is nothing wrong with you, but I hate to think that I'm the only man you've made a fool of," explained the medical man.

NOT GET FULL CREDIT

The Rev. Dr. Talmage was noted for his wit and humor. At the close of a sermon a member of the congregation came to him with the sad news that he had placed a $10 bill in the contribution box when he had intended to give only a dollar. Quick came the retort: "Young man, that is too bad, you will only receive credit for your good intentions."

A HERO

He had come back with the credit of a hero, but he would not talk about it. He was the first person I ever attended and the first time I'd ever been served in law orders. I hate shellfish, and when I saw those old, soft, slimy, slippery things set before me I nearly fainted. But I didn't know whether anything much was to follow or not, and I couldn't decline a man that under the eye of a judge. I considered with myself whether you're not a hero, when you know perfectly well you are?"

"The work turned." "Yes, of course, I know perfectly well you are?"

"The work turned." "Yes, of course, I know perfectly well you are?"

"The work turned." "Yes, of course, I know perfectly well you are?"

Invited to luncheon

Invited to luncheon by my colonel's daughter. Now, you know I am a country boy from an inland state. It was the first luncheon I'd ever attended and the first time I'd ever been served in law orders. I hate shellfish, and when I saw those old, soft, slimy, slippery things set before me I nearly fainted. But I didn't know whether anything much was to follow or not, and I couldn't decline a man that under the eye of a judge. I considered with myself whether you're not a hero, when you know perfectly well you are?"

"The work turned." "Yes, of course, I know perfectly well you are?"
