THURUDAY, NOVEMBER 8, 1028

THANKSGIVING DAY The year decays; November's blast Through leatiess bough pipes shrill and drear; With warmer love the home clasps fast The hands, the hearts, the friends most

On many seas men sail the fleet Of hoped as fruitless as, the foam; They room the world with restless feet. But find no sweeter spot than home To-day, with quickened hearts they hear

· Old times, old voices chime and call; The dreams of many a vanished year filt by them at this festival. Though hearts that warmed them once are cold. Though heads are hoar with winter

That once were bright with tangled gold, Thanks for the blessings kept or lost. Thanks for the strong, free wind of life, However it may change or veer; For the love of mother and slater and Clear stars that to the haven steer:

Por the quenchless lamps of changeless That burn in the night of the dead; Por the life that is, for the hope above, Be thanksgiving by all hearts said.

Did You Ever Stop To Think

That the holiday spirit is in the air these days, and it looks as if Christmas is going to be brighter and merrier than ever this year. Like the smallest village or town in the country, even blase New York is a-flutter.

I strolled down Fifth Avenue the other day and was much impressed by the handsome displays of holiday cards arranged by several of America's leading jewellery stores. The book and stationery marts, the many quaint little card shops, and the greeting card departments of the mammoth stores in the shopping section, are all displaying new designs and people are making their selections early in order to get just what they want and have their names put on in plenty of time to avoid the holiday rush. More so than with most things, I understand you have to choose Christmas cards early to get the best selections.

The 1928 cards seem bigger and brighter than in the past, and there are more of them. Many of them reveal the modern art influence which has struck furniture and jewellery, and has turned kitchens and bathrooms into riots of color.

.On the greeting eards it has not gone so far as to represent Christmas by two green triangles and three red circles, leaving the rest to the imagination. It appears, rather, in brighter colorings and bolder lines on the favorite old designs. The stage coaches dash more vigorously down snowy streets; the skies are black and have red sunsets to contrast the country scenes; purple ships bounce over green oceans; Christmas trees blaze with big gold candles. They are all so cheerful and modern and full of vigor,

The slogan, "Scatter Sunshine with Greeting Cards," which is seen so frequent in the newspapers, magazines and shop windows, is a constant suggestion to people to remember their friend. More people seem to be doing it more often.
