A VALENTINE

My little love! My pretty love! That you may know me true I send a packet wrapped in down-

The sweetest billet-doux. You'll find, within the bravest heart That ever breasted storm,

And yel, and thinks that Cupid's dart Would fill it with ularm. You'll find, beside, a silver lute, Attuned by Hope, the strings.

As Joy sped by with careless Mirthburshed it with his wings. I send then aff tied up in blue-

A scrap of summer skies. The color of ferget-me-nots, The shade of some one's even

And lest you miss my valentine, Look high in yonder tree, If 'tis a bluchird singing there-"Tis yours, sweetheart, from me. -Linnic Hawley Drake

Another thing which astonished in at Mr. -Nicklin's funeral was the statein nt by Mr. Moore in his address of approclation of his friend, that the two of them with their wives were the only two married couples in Acton where both husbands and wives had been born in Acton, had been married in Acton and had spent all their married lives in Acton. This statement seemed so striking and sweeping that it almost took me off my feet at the time, but since then I have canvassed the town mentally, up one street and down another, and I know the people pretty generally, and I find I am unable to dispute the statement. It looks to me to-day as if Mr. and Mrs. H. P. Moore are now the only married couple in Acton, old or young, where both husband and wife were native born residents, and have lived here till their lives. And furthermore, they reside on the site of the husband's birth, and within three hundred yards of the birthplace of Mrs. Moore.

congregation ever since.

Some of you who are not old residents of Acton may not be aware that Mrs. Nicklin is the second daughter of the inte W. H. Storey, and that Mrs. Moore. is the second daughter of the late John the vanished Speight, and that both these fathers were members of the first Municipal Council elected in Acton after its incorporation in 1873; and both Mr. Nicklin's father and Mrs. Moore's father were in partnership with W. II. Storey in certain business enterprises. A further incidence is the fact that both Mr. Storey and Mr. Speight were in the early days superintendent of the Methodist Sunday School; and that Mr. Speight, Mr. Moore and Mr. Nicklin were charter perance; and that A. E. Nicklin and II. the little picture of "Victory" in his And may we find, when ended is the the same organization, that they were P. A GIFT OF APPRECIATION

"There is one thing about Helen," said a girl speaker; "she has a genuine gift of appreciation. Whenever your speak of anylody she always seems to bubble over with some kindly appreciation of her. When someone remarked the other day that Miss IC - was not at all pretty. she broke out with, 'Yes, but then some people don't need to be pretty, they're 'nice enough without it.' It is plwaya that way with her; she has seen the gleam of gold somewhere in somebody that nobody else ever detected or thought of looking for. Her older sister is a splendid musician and her younger is quite a brilliant elocutionist, but I don't know but I'd rather have Helen's talent of appreciating people than to have the gifts of either of the others. I believe she gets more joy out of it and perhaps gives more Joy with it" It is a talent toward the acquiring o which we can do a great deal by practice, even if we seem to be lacking in it by nature.—Exchange.
