THE FUNSITINE CLOSET

When all the world seems gloomy, and all the sky is gray. And all we children fret because it ralny day, funshine closet's opened wide, and games and toys brought out.

And right away we start to laugh and quite forget to pout The funshine closet's always locked, except on rainy days, Or when some one of us in sick and needs diverting plays. And there are things for pleasant work, and games and knives and twine; Not having them on every day, they do seem extra fine! You surely must try funshine, a substitute for aunshine; You soon forget a stormy day while with the funshine!

But though you have no closet, and your mother can't amuse, All children have funshiny days whenever they may choose; For being good and happy when forced to play indoors, Will always make a funshine day, no matter how it pours. By Marion Beattle
