Milady Gets Her Furs

A New York furrier telephoned to his representative in Montreal: "Itush one hundred and fifty marten skins; we have a buyer who wants quick action." The fur man in Montreal 'phoned Edmonton, talling his needs. Without delay the Edmonton man called the radio station and word went out advising trappers at several points in the far north to be ready to turn the aking over to the airman who would call for them in a few hours. . The next day the airman is back and the furs are speeding east by nortal transport. In three days from the time of his request the furrier in Manhattan turns the skins over to his purchaser. The lonely trapper is no more, for the telephone, radio and noroplane in combination have punetrated even the far northern solitudes.
